Sweetheart plans Dick Tufenkjian, vice president of Sweetheart Plastics, displays plans for a new warehouse, at last week's finance committee hearing.

These two plus 98 Cathy Ryan and Pam Manzo (standing) were two of the 100 people who donated blood to the Red Cross at Wilmington High School Tuesday afternoon. The senior class has, for several years made its gift to the town upon graduation, the gift of life, a blood mobile. In the back is RN Elizabeth Clark. A total of 106 people volunteered to donate.

Fincom gives approval to warehouse

The Wilmington Finance Committee has recommended approval both articles for the May 18 special town meeting. The proposal of the Bedell family to rezoned land for a Sweetheart Plastics warehouse was approved unanimously, 6-0. The proposal to sell the land of the former North Wilmington Bakery to David Salera passed 5-1. Anita Backman of the fincom voted against. She told the fincom that she always opposes the selling of town owned land.

Sweetheart Plastics had its case presented by Dick Tufenkjian, vice president of the firm. He told the fincom that entry by way of Floradale Avenue or Butters Row is impractical. The firm plans only one entrance, from Main Street, in one of five possible rights-of-way across land that is zoned for business or industry.

Sweetheart has 18 warehouses, in the U.S. They are designed for access by rail, as will be this one. Erection of this warehouse will stop a lot of the present truck traffic to a warehouse in Lawrence, and to another in Woburn. All traffic between the plant and the new warehouse will be by rail.

At the present time there are about 16,700 vehicles per day, at the junction of Main Street and Lowell Street (Rts. 38 and 129) Tufenkjian said. There are probably 29,000 to 30,000 vehicles at the crossroads of Rtes 38 and 62 (Wilmington Square).

Of this traffic 112 trucks from Sweetheart go through the center on an average day, 56 in and 56 out. When the new warehouse is in service this will probably be cut to 102 trucks on an average day. There will be less truck traffic, because of Sweetheart Plastics, than there is today.

Tufenkjian told the fincom that the new warehouse would be at least 300 feet distant from the old Middlesex Canal, which would not be on Sweetheart Plastics property. The tax revenue, for the warehouse, according to the principal assessor of Wilmington, would be about $250,000 a year, based on an assessment of 75 cents a square foot.

The property which David Salera seeks to buy faces on both Salem Street and Oak Street, and is partly in a rural zone. It was the site of the former North Wilmington Bakery, and the home of the owner of that bakery, both of which have been torn down.

Town Manager Sterling Morris said the full and fair market value of the property is $18,000.

Bicycle safety program Saturday

A bike safety program sponsored by V.F.W. Post 2458 Auxiliary in conjunction with Wilmington's July Fourth Celebration Committee will be held Saturday, May 16 on Wilmington Common.

Safety inspections and taping will take place between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. and refreshments will be served to participants.

All Wilmington youngsters are urged to take advantage of this free program.

The glass windows outside the nursery at Winchester Hospital were crowded with faces as visitors and staff all tried to get a peek at Baby A, Baby B and Baby C Sarchione. The triplet boys were born Wednesday, May 6 to Margaret and Kenneth Sarchione, 3 Meadow Lane, Wilmington.

Full-term babies, they weighed what is considered "an amazing weight for triplets." Baby A weighed 4 lbs., 6 oz.; Baby B weighed 4 lbs., 7 oz.; and Baby C weighed 5 lbs 12 1/2 oz. They were delivered by Nabil E. Arian, M.D.

Mrs. Sarchione let her three children at home name their brothers. The choice was up to Kenny, 14, Paula 13, and Stacey, 9. "I don't know what they'll come up with," Mrs. Sarchione said, "but it's up to them." They came up with Kevin, Keith and Kirk.

The babies' father, Kenneth, "is very relieved they're all here," his wife said as she smiled and shook her head. "You know, while I gained weight, he lost. Since he found out seven weeks ago that we were going to have triplets, he lost 15 pounds."

After one hour of labor, Mrs. Sarchione gave birth to the boys within a few minutes of each other. The first boy arrived at 11:47 p.m., the next at 11:52 p.m., and Baby C missed having his own birthday by a minute. He was born at 11:59 p.m.

Mrs. Sarchione, who stands five feet tall and weighs 102 pounds, said, "My mother is going to help me during the day for the first three weeks after I go home, but at night we'll be on our own. I only hope they are contented babies. I couldn't have coped with this with my first or second baby, but I guess I'm more relaxed now. We'll do it somehow, and of course the older children will be a help."

Three babies present more than one problem, not the least of which are sleeping arrangements. The Sarchiones have only one crib, but their mother said, "At first I'll put them side by side the long way in the crib, and that will do while they're tiny. Later, maybe I can borrow a couple of cribs."

To mark the unusual event, Jack R. Hunter, president of Winchester Hospital, presented Mrs. Sarchione with a quartz clock with an appropriate inscription, and the nursing staff presented a bouquet. The hospital also gave the babies three cases of pampers.

Because of their good size, the babies are expected to go home when they are 10 days old.

The grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Paul R. Doucette of Woburn and Mr. and Mrs. Bernadino Sarchione of Billerica, formerly of Shawsheen Avenue.

Three drew a crowd

Jazz Band Pops Concert

As concert time approaches, the Tewksbury High School Band and Jazz Band's Fourth Annual Pops Concert scheduled for Sunday, May 17 is shaping up nicely. Many will remember last year's 'A Tribute to Arthur Feidler' which was a tremendous success. This year's theme is 'A Tribute to Broadway.' Featured in the this year's Pops will be music from such Broadway favorites as The Sound of Music, Porgy and Bess, and My Fair Lady. Also under preparation is the music from the score of 'A Chorus Line' which features the very popular song, "What I Did for Love." Conductor Joseph Musumeci hopes that it will be ready for performance by concert time.

The format of the concert will once again be fashioned after that of the Boston Pops. The Pops features music of a light and popular nature amidst the surroundings of floral decorations, reserved tables and sparkling refreshments. A large selection of raffle items will once again be provided.

Tables may be reserved by calling Mrs. Kenneth Gaines at 851-5277. Reserved table tickets are $3.00 each and can only be obtained from Mrs. Gaines. Bleacher tickets are available from band and color guard members and at the door for $2.00. Concert time is 7:30 p.m. sharp.

The following band parents are heading up the various committees: decorations, Mrs. Jan MacPherson; foral arrangements, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond LaFortune; publicity, Mrs. Cathy Marble; raffle table, Mrs. Lorene Patch; refreshments, Tom Fuller, Mrs. Gerry Boucher and Mrs. Dene Haslam; reserved tables, Mrs. Kenneth Gaines; table loans Mrs. Jo Fisher.

Tewksbury planners make zoning article recommendations

The Tewksbury Planning Board, under the direction of newly elected Chairman Joseph Doherty, voted their recommendations on nine articles appearing in the Annual Town Meeting Warrant last Monday night. Before taking any votes Doherty told a group of 25-30 residents, most of whom appeared to reaffirm their opposition to a proposed rezoning of land on Andover Street, that any recommendations the planning board makes to the town meeting are "purely advisory". He added that if the voters disagree with the planner's recommendations they have the power to vote the opposite way.

The first article discussed was a request to rezone land on Main Street. Ralph McCann, owner of local amusement establishment, is seeking to have a parcel of land in back of the "funland" amusement center rezoned from general residence and farming to light industrial. His request gained the support of the planners on a unanimous vote.

Planner George Donovan moved to recommend approval of the request. The land in question, according to the planners, is now in a non-conforming use situation. Donovan said, "I don't see any problem with it." He cited that there are businesses already surrounding the land in question and that the rezoning will make it more legal than it is right now.

The second article discussed calls for the rezoning of about 28 acres of land off of the southerly side of Andover Street from general residence and farming to a multiple family district. The request was made by John DiPalma, Armando DeCarolis and Planner Robert Sullivan. They are proposing to build an eight building condominium complex on the land.

The proposal drew heavy opposition from abutters and other residents of the area at a public hearing two weeks ago. Most of those same residents were in attendance to hear what recommendation the planners would give for the proposal.

The residents, through their spokesperson Mrs. Roberta

Wilmington's Carters: 'Bill Hen One'

The writer has told the story of Bill Hen Two, the farmer who lived on Shawsheen Avenue in Wilmington. His name, as related was William Henry Carter, and he was a Burlington born man. This is to tell of the first William Henry Carter, a man who lived in Hardscrabble. He was born in Wilmington and was the first of the two men to be called Bill Hen - except that people rarely did. Sometimes he was referred to as Bill Hen One.

Hardscrabble, 150 and more years ago, was a very definite part of what is now North Wilmington. High Street goes through Hardscrabble. It was an area of forty to sixty acres that today would probably include Linda Road, and some other streets. But when a person said Hardscrabble, it was what is now High Street, etc. that was being referred to.

It was a hilltop area, without much soil. That was how it got that name.

Richard Harnden lived in Hardscrabble, but he did not call it such, back in 1667. His sons, too, lived in Hardscrabble, as did Capt. John Harnden, he who commanded a company of mostly Wilmington soldiers at Bunker Hill. Richard lived at the easterly end of High Street, in a farmhouse that overlooked The Andover Road.

Another man who lived in Hardscrabble was the Dr. Brown who was the physician to Wilmington during the years of the Revolution. He was no relative to the Dr. Brown (Silas) who bought the Harnden Tavern about 1816. The Revolutionary War physician lived at the top of the hill, about where Arlene Lally lives today.

There was another farmhouse in Hardscrabble, in the days after the Revolution. It was a Carter farmhouse, and is today the home of the Espinosa family and Helen Allen. Back in the years of, say before the War of 1812 it was the home of a farmer named Henry Carter.

The records for the Carter family are best described as 'difficult', for sometimes they are very confusing. There seems to have been five Carter families, in the old Town of Woburn.

Henry Carter was of an old Wilmington family, and he married a girl named Hannah Lewis. She came from Milford, New Hampshire.

That was back about 1810. That was at the peak of the 'Hop Growing era' of Wilmington.

Wilmington farmers who owned upland farms, such as Hardscrabble, and other rocky areas of Wilmington and nearby towns made a lot of money growing hops, in those years. Wilmington hops were sold all over the northeastern seaboard for thirty years or so.

The reader can tell, almost at a glance, where the hops were grown, in Wilmington. Rocky fields, with a lot of stone walls, on high ground is the clue. Go look at the top of the hills. Maybe it is in what is today woods, but if there are stone walls to be seen, that was a site for a Wilmington hop farm. Millions of pounds of hops were shipped out of Wilmington, a lot on the barges of the old Middlesex Canal.

The hop industry died out about 1835-40. The bottom of the market died as farmers in other parts of the United States learned to grow hops. At the same time Wilmington hop vines were afflicted with the 'hop blight'.

It would seem that Henry Carter made a lot of money in those years. It would seem that he built his new home, westerly of the old one, maybe as early as 1823, to judge by chisel marks in the foundation.

It was a fine home, built in the Federal style. The lumber was probably locally sawn, in Nod Mill, up on what is now Salem Street. The foundation stones, too, are local, but those just under the sill may have been cut in Chelmsford, and sent down to Wilmington via the Middlesex Canal. There are a half dozen fireplaces. The carpenter work was of high quality and order.

In this home lived Henry and Hannah Lewis Carter and their 11 children. The first born was Cyrus Lewis. He waited for 63 years to be married. The lady was Sarah Davis Jaquith, of an old Wilmington Huguenot family. They lived where the new Reading Bank building has been built, on Main Street. It was Sarah D. J. Carter who, in later years left money in her will for the establishment of the S. D. J. Carter lectures.

Cyrus was a business man who made a lot of money in lumber.

Another of the children was Rebecca Lincoln Carter. She married Henry Blanchard, and lived across the street from her parents, in the old farmhouse of Dr. Brown. That farmhouse was replaced. A second home on that site was destroyed sixty or seventy years ago, by fire. It was then known as the Naray home.

Henry Blanchard was a descendant of just about every family in Wilmington, one might say. One grandfather was Sgt. William Blanchard, of the Wilmington Minutemen, who marched and fought under the command of Capt. Cadwallader Ford, another grandfather, on Concord Day. A third ancestor was the Rev. Issac Morrill, he, who with another minister escorted the Bedford minister to the British lines, the day after Concord, because that minister had Tory leanings.

William Henry was born in 1813, probably in the old farmhouse. He grew up there and in the new home. After his father's death in 1861 William Henry Carter inherited the home, today the home of the Perdicaro family.

That fact doesn't tell much, and yet it tells a lot. There had been eleven children. Only three were left in Wilmington. The others had either passed on, or had emigrated to the west.

Wilmington, in spite of having large families, did not increase in population to any degree, between the Revolution and the Civil War.

The Carter children probably moved west, as did, for instance Henry Harnden, from the Harnden farm one hundred yards away. Henry became a cavalry officer in the 4th Wisconsin, in the Civil War, and then became the man who captured Jefferson Davis, the Confederate president. Thus there is a record of Henry Harnden, but not of his friends in the Carter family.

Railroads were being built, in the 1830s and 1840s. William Henry got a job with the Boston Maine Railroad. Perhaps he was a conductor. Possibly he was a clerk. There was, in Lawrence, a man named William Henry Carter.

That William Henry married a girl named Sara J. Nothing more is known of her, except that she died in Wilmington, at the age of 33, in 1844.

William Henry married, a second time, to a Lawrence lady named Judith. The year was 1852, and she was 29 years old.

The couple moved to Wilmington. Possibly they lived with his father. William Henry was soon afterwards elected Town Clerk of Wilmington.

Shortly afterwards there was one of those fights that can occur only in politics. Just what it was about isn't known today, but William Henry went into print, over that fight. In that printed message William Henry said what he thought about the opposition - but, in a gentlemanly manner.

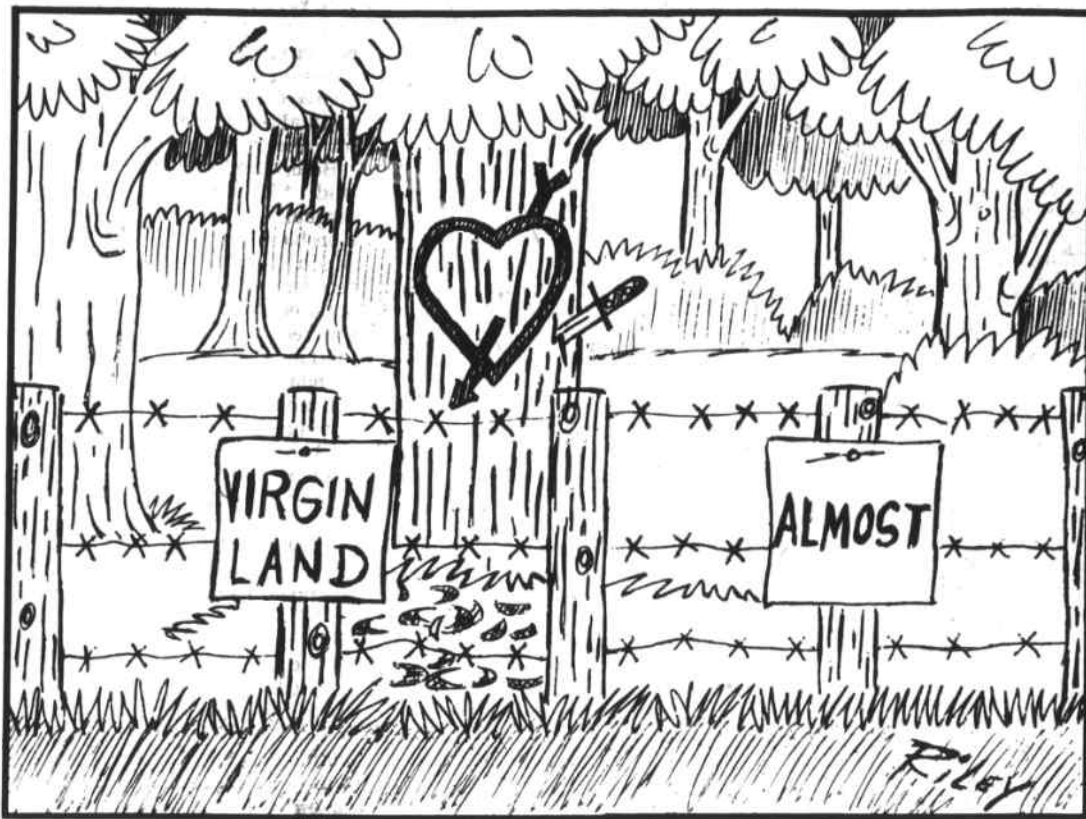

There was but one child born to William Henry and Judith Carter, - a daughter named Maria Walker Carter.

Maria lived in the home of her father and grandfather. She took care of her father, who lived to be ninety, and who died on November 24, 1903. She too, lived for many years, alone in the home. Her gravestone may be seen by the curious, just about in the middle of Wildwood Cemetery.

There were more than a few men whose names were William Carter, it can be noted.

But there were only two named William Henry, and when William Henry from Burlington moved into Wilmington there arose a problem of confusion. It was after then that the William Henry I, and the William Henry II phrases originated.

The Shawsheen Avenue man was the person who got the name of Bill Hen. The use of that name with the North Wilmington was

Dear Larz:

Thank you for mentioning the art exhibit in connection with the Reception at the new Reading Savings Bank, but please print this correction of the date:

The Arts Council was appointed last June by the Board of Selectmen, and any future members will be appointed by the selectmen also, so that it would be erroneous to say "new members are constantly being invited to join."

However, there is in Wilmington a private incorporated non-profit organization entitled the Wilmington Friends of the Arts, with several categories of membership open to Wilmington residents interested in the arts - music, theatre, dance, sculpture, painting, fine arts, whether as not, it seemed, used as a direct form of address.

But the writer may be in error. The Hardscrabble home of William Henry Carter was sold after his daughter died. Sixty years ago it was the home of the Howell Wilcox family. Since then there have been several owners.

The present owners are Frank and Lillian Perdicaro. They have taken good care of the home. It bids to last many more years.

Dear Larz:

Thank you for publishing my letter last week. The Crier certainly must be well - read. Have had a number of phone calls from concerned citizens. Soem pro and some con. The Town fathers however, remain strangely silent.

Dick Tufenkjian from Sweetheart Plastics invited me over to show me the plans for the Main Street warehouse. Pat Wood of Butters Row and I went for a visit last Wednesday. The layout is very good looking, with the entrance off Main Street (Rt. 38). He could not disclose the site of the driveway, since it is still in the process of negotiation. However, he assured us that it would not come up as far as the square, nor would it interfere with the Butters Row area, nor would the trucks be running down Floradale. The entrance would be similar to the crossing that Sweetheart now has to its present warehouse.

Tufenkjian demonstrated the parking area, which would be located on the left, but would have a buffer zone of trees between it and the yards on Butters Row. He promised trees for Floradale (hallelujah!) area, where they would like to develop a recreation area for the employees. It certainly does sound like an improvement over what now stands.

The "spot" zoning bothered me at first. Then I remembered that we had "spot" zoned for Diamond Crystal's warehouse, adjacent on the northerly side of the site which Sweetheart is requesting. This change was done without a flutter a few years ago. The warehouse has been operating there for some time now, and the people in town hardly know it because there is no noise. Tufenkjian assures me that there will be only 30 employees working in the Sweetheart warehouse at one time, and that the freight cars that we hear being coupled at 2:00 a.m. now do not belong to Sweetheart. Their shipments go out between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., and the traffic manager assured me of this. He also gave us names of night supervisors to call at Sweetheart when the rail work was going on at night, and they would stop same.

Last week, when I said that Sweetheart was "good" for the Town, I was referring to the fact that they employ many town folk, in fact, whole families. Now instead of warehousing in Lowell and Somerville, they would have everything located in Wilmington. We can certainly benefit from the additional taxes from this site.

Pat Wood and I discussed briefly the "spot" zoning. All of us are concerned about what happens to the remainder of those woods in our back yards. However, the area that Sweetheart has designated for their site is, as I stated last week, strictly from the "planet of the apes" at this point, and will soon be worse, since we just had the word from the Town Hall that the sewer connection is incorrect, and in order to make it operational, the exchange must be done over. (Now they will have to again dig up Floradale, because the last contractors made the exchange incorrectly. So here we go with the trench, troughs, dirt, pumps, and water for another summer!)

Sweetheart has no control over what happens to the remaining land adjacent to the site. The Bedell family owns that.

Rezoning for that part of the land would be brought to the Town Meeting before development, just as the warehouses have been, since it is presently zoned residential.

So ponder on it. Talk to your friends and neighbors. Go to Town Meeting and listen to what Tufenkjian and Sam Shapiro have to say. Then vote according to your conscience. But "Give 'em a break and go!"

See you there. Thanks, Larz.

PRETTIER SMILE FROM 'BONDING'

One of the most exciting revolutions in cosmetic dentistry is the use of composite materials that can be molded onto your teeth to change their shape, fill spaces, and result in the smile you've always wanted.

It is also possible to bond tooth-colored plastic facings onto natural teeth, to cover badly stained or discolored teeth. And this can be done almost invariably without drilling and in one office visit.

An acid-etching prepares the tooth surface, the composite is placed on and shaped into the desired appearance and hardens when activated by ultraviolet light.

This is today's answer for those who have long been unhappy with the appearance of their smile.

Tewksbury zoning

Nadeau, had asked the planners to render an "unfavorable" recommendation at the public hearing. The residents are concerned with the proposal to fill in wetlands for the construction of the condo units. They fear that filling will cause run-off problems and increase the risk of having their property flooded. They are also concerned with the town will get the water to provide to the units, increased flow of traffic and a disruption to the aesthetic beauty of the area.

Before the board began their discussion of the article Sullivan requested he be allowed to step down to avoid a conflict of interest. Sullivan left the room while his fellow board members decided which way to go with their recommendation.

Planner David Cook moved that the recommendation be to disapprove the request. He cited his stance on apartments in town has been to allow them on Route 38 (Main St.), but nowhere else.

His motion drew some cheers from the residents, but their exultation was short lived.

Donovan told his fellow planners he would not be voting on the recommendation because he felt he was put into an awkward situation. Donovan told the residents he had asked for the opinion of town counsel when Sullivan first came on the board. He said he wanted a set of guidelines the board could follow if a conflict of interest like this had been brought up. That request, Donovan said, was denied by his fellow board members. He further said, "At town meeting, as an individual voter, I can make my own statements."

After Donovan announced his decision not to vote, Planner Wilfred Lambert moved "no recommendation". Doherty seconded that motion which left Cook's motion without a second.

Lambert said, "I want the minutes to show we did take a vote because if no vote is taken then it is an automatic no recommendation." Doherty explained that "because the board is split" Lambert's motion "will allow for debate of it on the town floor".

Before taking the vote Doherty said, "We had two members disqualify themselves, so we have a problem." He then took the vote which was two in favor of no recommendation and one (Cook) opposed. Doherty said that since the required three votes in the affirmative for a recommendation was not met then the recommendation would be an automatic no recommendation.

There was an outcry from the residents, some of whom had termed the action a "bag job" and a "cop out".

In an effort to explain the move Doherty told the residents that he "supported apartments before" and "I feel if I did vote, I'd vote in favor of it". He added that under the circumstances the issue should be opened up to the town floor.

The residents still kept complaining and said that the board was not representing them.

Doherty, in an effort to get back to the business at hand told the residents, "I suggest you get the people up at town meeting and vote it down."

The planners moved on to unanimously vote to recommend approval of a request to rezone a parcel of land on Main St. near Livingston St. from general business to a proposed new zone of combination-use district. The request was made by Linda A. Thomas and others. The request apparently complies with all the stipulations set forth in the proposed new district. The land consists of about ten acres. The building will be newly constructed and mix residential and business uses.

The planners also voted unanimously to recommend approval of an article that would change the flood plan zoning based on new maps drawn up by HUD.

The planners voted 4-1, with Lambert opposed, to recommend disapproval of a rezoning request made by James DeCarolus. DeCarolus wants to rezone a parcel of land on the Andover Town line near the junction of

TOWN CRIER, MAY 13, 1981

Route 93 and Vale Street from general residence to light industrial. DeCarolus proposes to construct office buildings on the land.

He, too, met with heavy opposition from residents of the area at the public hearing. They claimed that the office park would create a hazardous traffic situation on Vale Street. They feel that Vale Street is bad enough as it is without subjecting it to heavy truck traffic they feel would be generated from the office park.

Donovan made the motion to recommend disapproval because there is residential land on either side of the proposed office park and he believes it would cause a big traffic problem. Lambert asked for no recommendation. He said this request should be put on the town floor the same as the Andover Street request had been.

Another request from James DeCarolus to rezone a parcel of land on Main St. from general residence to a multiple family district did not receive a recommendation. The planners were not exactly sure how much of the land on Main St. was proposed to be rezoned. They voted to table action on the recommendation until they could talk with DeCarolus.

A unanimous vote to recommend approval of an article that would allow for the use of ceramic products (electrical kilns only) only in industrial zones was taken.

Donovan asked that an article he wrote which would amend the multiple family district section of the zoning by-laws be withdrawn. He said he found himself once again in a awkward and patronizing position. Lambert moved for a recommendation of approval and the board voted that recommendation on a 4-1 margin with Donovan opposed.

The last article the board discussed was for a combination or mixed use district. The article would establish a district in town were no more than 60 percent and no less than 30 percent of a new building would be used for multiple family dwellings while no less than 40 percent and no more than 70 percent of that same building would be used for office or business space. The planners voted unanimously to recommend approval of the article.

Letters to the editor

Dear Larz:

As a six year resident of Tewksbury, I have not as astutely as I should, followed everything that has happened, will happen, or should happen in this town.

Quite a few things have disturbed me, but nothing has caused me more anger as the remarks attributed to Mr. Armando DeCarolus printed in the Town Crier of May 6 about the McLaren Road area.

The remarks were made when asked about the maintenance of a proposed chain link fence to be erected at the end of Tenth Street to soothe the ruffled feathers of the residents, so that Mr. DeCarolus could construct multifamily condos behind John's Fruitland.

Accordingly, the Town Crier printed that Mr. DeCarolus replied that he would not maintain the fence and stated his reasons.

Quote: "The end of McLaren Road is a place where people park and sleep all night and where things get destroyed. I go to work at 7 a.m. and there are people down there sleeping in cars," unquote.

Well, Mr. DeCarolus, I have lived at the end of McLaren Road for six years and have witnessed nothing that would come close to your statement. My husband also goes to work every morning, but at 5:30 not 7:00 and he has not seen any parked cars. My children travel McLaren Road at 6:45 a.m. to the Methodist Church for their school buses and they have yet to see parked cars with people sleeping in them.

I feel that Mr. DeCarolus' comments about this area are in error and that they give a distorted view of just what goes on here. Unfounded and unsubstantiated statements of this nature have been made too often and it's about time that they were noticed and corrected. Comments of this sort should not be made about any area, and allowed to pass idly by.

Thank you,
Daisy M. Stitsel

Dear Larz:

A group of Horizon Club Girls from Tewksbury have been chosen to attend a nation-wide conference for Camp Fire Youth at the Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs. These girls must pay their own way to Colorado, so during the next six weeks they will be doing many things to raise money for the trip.

Camp Fire serves youth in Tewksbury from first grade through high school.

Our girls work during the school year on many projects giving service to this community. The major project they work on are tray favors for every holiday for the state hospital and Casa Grande Nursing Home. The older girls are now working on a bib project for the state hospital.

We are proud of our girls, and we, the volunteer leaders, and members of the Tewksbury Camp Fire Board ask that the people of this town help them in any way possible. For further information contact Town Chairman M. Moulaison (851-6582), or Older Girl Chairman, B. Rogers (851-6182).

Town Crier Sports

Billerica United (striped shirts) nipped the Tewksbury Youth Soccer Division II B boys 2-1 in heated action Saturday afternoon in Tewksbury. See the complete Tewksbury Youth Soccer wrapup on page 11.

Pop Warner registration

The Tewksbury Pop Warner football program will hold its 1981 season sign-ups Saturday morning (May 16) from 9:00 to noon at the youth center on Livingston Street. A supplemental registration will be held Wednesday evening, May 20 at the Town Hall from 6:30 to 9:00 for those who can not make the first sign-up.

To be eligible for this program, a boy must have been born on or between August 1, 1967 and December 31, 1972. Also, boys born on or between January 1, 1967 and July 31, 1967 weighing approximately 110 pounds will be allowed to play on traveling A teams. All boys must be accompanied by a parent or guardian, and should bring a copy of their birth certificate as proof of age. All boys intending to play football this season must register even if they played on a team last year.

Pop Warner football is one of the fastest growing programs sponsored by the Tewksbury Recreation Department, and all candidates will be placed on teams on a first come, first served basis. Pop Warner officials urge those intending to play to sign-up early to avoid being placed on a reserve list. The program will not expand this year.

Tewksbury Pop Warner will be the host site for the Nationally sanctioned Carnation Bowl in November. Teams will be coming from Winston-Salem, North Carolina and the midwest area to compete against the Tewksbury Pop Warner clubs. Tewksbury qualified again for this honor, with its scholastic and athletic aptitude being ranked number two in the United States in the Junior Midget Division.

Due to the uncertainty of Proposition Two and a Half's effects on Recreation programs, a registration fee may be assessed at a later date.

Pop Warner Scholarship

Any girl and boy graduating this year from Tewksbury High School who has been accepted to a college may apply for the Tewksbury Pop Warner Football Scholarship at the TMHS guidance office to Mr. Francis Sheehan, or by writing Mr. Michael J. Whelton, Tewksbury Pop Warner Director, at 41 John Street, Tewksbury.

To be eligible, you must have graduated from the Tewksbury Pop Warner program.

Phillips impresses National audience

Wilmington High School senior javelin thrower Matt Phillips surprised and impressed a national track and field audience this past weekend with his first place effort in the prestigious Glenn Loucks Memorial Track and Field Games at White Plains, New York.

Matt uncorked a winning heave of 198'10" in his specialty to fall short of his personal best throw of 209 feet.

Later in the weekend, Phillips returned to the his home state to take a first in the State Coaches Meet with a winning toss of 200'9".

Girls freshmen track

The Tewksbury girls' Junior High track and field squad upped its MVC record to 3-0 this past week with a solid 68-31 victory over Chelmsford's Parker Junior High and a stunning 53-47 upset of last year's defending conference champion, Andover East.

Tewksbury 68-Chelmsford Parker 31

In their first meet, the Junior High Redgals had defeated the 'other' Chelmsford school, McCarty Junior High, 68-32, and they weren't any kinder to Chelmsford's Parker, as they clubbed them by almost an identical score of 68-31.

Tewksbury won nine of the 12 events, with Beverly Luken winning three events - the long jump, 80 meter low hurdles and 220 yard dash. Luken won the long jump with a 14'8" jump, the hurdles in 12.3 seconds and the 220 in 29.1 seconds.

Teammate Kelley Drane took thirds in the 220 and the 100 yard dash.

Tewksbury swept two events, taking first, second, and third in the shot put and the discus. Nancy McNeil led the sweep in the shot throw, while Michelle Fleury and Suzanne Dixon finished second and third respectively. Michelle Fleury won the discus with an 81'4" toss, and Sandy Maguire took a surprising second place with a 72'1" throw. Maguire's previous best throw had been in the low 60' range. Nancy McNeil pulled out the third in the discus.

Distance ace Kathy Weisensee dropped down to the 440 and won with a 68.6 time, while eighth grade middle distance standout Jody Bangs edged out teammate Chrissy Silk in the 880 with a 2:37.7 finish.

Michelle Muise jumped up to the mile and edged out another surprising performer, Shelley Stalker, with a 6:22.9 time. Tewksbury's mile relay team of Anne Dougherty, Jody Bangs, Chrissy Silk, and Kathy Weisensee breezed home to victory with a 4:38 time.

Tewksbury 53-Andover East 57 For the past two springs, Andover East has defeated Tewksbury by 51-49 scores. Last season, East also dealt the Redgals a one point defeat in the League Meet. This year, the Tewksbury girls went to Andover with fire in their eyes and came away with a thrilling, heart throbbing, 53-47 victory.

Tewksbury went into the final event - the mile relay - with a 48-47 lead. The winner of the mile relay would receive five points, the loser none. The relay team of Kathy Murphy, Jody bangs, Chrissy Silk, Michelle Muise came through, with an 11 second victory and a 4:34.8 time.

Beverly Luken, Tewksbury's track sensation, again won three events - the long jump (14'7"), the low hurdles (12.1) and the 220 (29.4). The meet's top performance came from distance ace Kathy Weisensee, as Kathy won the mile in a breeze with a 5:58.3 time, but it was her surprisingly exceptional performance in the high jump that caught here teammates' attention.

Kathy had tried the high jump in practice the day before the meet. Jumping for the first time in competition one day later, she leaped 4'8" for second place and a tie of the school record.

Michelle Muise outkicked her Andover East counterpart in the 440 to win in 68.1, and she also took a third in the long jump. Michelle Fleury won the discus event for the third meet in a row with an 83'1" toss, ahead of teammate Nancy Chase, who threw 74'11".

Nancy McNeil pulled out a third in the shot put, as did Kelley Drain (100 and 220) and Anne Dougherty in the 440 yard run. Chrissy Silk, in the 880, and Shelley Stalker in the mile also pulled off excellent third place performances in their specialties. Jody Bangs gutted out a win in the 880 run with a 2:35.2 time.

Tewksbury continues its quest for individual and team improvement Friday, May 15 when they host Dracut at the Tewksbury track and field complex. Tuesday, May 19 the team travels to Andover West at the Andover High School track for another key confrontation.

Tewksbury 62-Chelmsford McCarty 38 Beverly Luken picked right up where she left off as an eighth grader, setting new school records in Tewksbury's Junior High girls track and field opener as Tewksbury defeated McCarthy Junior High of Chelmsford, 62-38.

Luken's first school record came in the long jump when she soared 15'6", while the second school record Luken set came in the 80 meter low hurdles when she ran a 12.0, a second better than the old school mark. Beverly was edged out in the 100 yard dash, as she recorded the same time (12.3) as the winner from Chelmsford.

The most exciting event of the meet was the discus, where Michelle Fleury heaved an 81'10" toss on her final throw to defeat teammates Nancy Chase and Nancy McNeil, both girls having thrown good 70 foot tosses.

Michelle Muise, Tewksbury's defending league champion in the 880, breezed through her specialty with an excellent 2:39.5 time, ahead of teammate Chrissy Silk. Nancy Wakeen made a valiant attempt for third place, but just missed the mark.

Nancy McNeil, an eighth grader, added a third in the

Independence Day Tennis Tourney

In conjunction with the Wilmington Bicentennial Committee's Fourth of July celebration, a tennis tournament will be held at the high school and Woburn Street courts. Events will include men's and women's singles competition for town residents, a special mixed doubles event and a special competition for those who work in Wilmington. Preliminary rounds will be held June 27 and 28, with the finals

July 4. The finals will be followed by awards presentations on the common. There will be an entry fee of $2.50, with all proceeds to benefit the Fourth of July festivities. It's a great opportunity to play tennis, and more importantly, to participate in and support this unique community celebration. Entry forms can be picked up at the Wilmington Recreation Department office or by calling Lenny Gustus at 851-9713.

Wilmington frosh split

The Wilmington freshman baseball team split its two games this past week, defeating Lawrence, 7-6 and losing to Chelmsford, 5-4. Some clutch pitching by Frank Carta, and excellent defensive support from Bob Sullivan, Dennis Sullivan, Larry Grant, Dennis Riley and Tony Cenca held off Lawrence in the latter innings to preserve the victory.

Paul Caizzi's consistent hustle, and Dean Athanasia's hitting supplied the offensive punch. Once again, Dennis Moran pitched a strong game despite losing to Chelmsford, 5-4. Dennis continually pitched out of difficult situations. Paul Bossi's hitting and Stephen Stokes' all around intelligent play enabled Wilmington to score its five runs.

Kathy Murphy gave the Redgals a third in the high jump, and Michelle Fleury followed her win in the discus with a third in the shot put and a third in the 440. Tewksbury's outstanding miler Kathy Weisensee romped in her specialty, as she cruised to a 5.52 victory. Kathy also snared a third place in the long jump.

Nancy Saunders, one of Tewksbury's better sprinters, took a third in the 100 and chalked

Eighth grade middle distance ace Jody Bangs ran away from her teammates in the 440 with an excellent 67.7 time, while Anne Dougherty gutted out a second place finish in the quarter mile.

MVC baseball

Sargent scatters Billerica, 6-2

Wilmington High School senior righthander Glen Sargent picked up his fourth win of the spring Friday in MVC baseball action with a 6-2 conquest of the tough Billerica Indians.

Glen limited the Indians to just four hits while whiffing four and walking seven.

Tom Filio paced the Wildcat attack with three hits, while Craig Richards lashed a big two RBI single.

In other MVC action Friday, Lawrence nipped Tewksbury, 2-1 despite a gem of a pitching performance from junior lefthander Mike Skidmore, who fired a two-hitter in his first varsity start.

Singles by Todd DiRocco and Paul Morgan coupled with a Lancer error pushed Tewksbury's lone run across in the third inning.

Frosh softball

Tewksbury downs Methuen, Dracut

The Tewksbury freshmen softball squad won two games last week to up their record 5-0, defeating Methuen, 8-7 and Dracut, 12-9. In Wednesday action against a strong Methuen team, the defensive standouts were Laura Briggs (three for four), Linda Barry (two for four), Sandy Hennessy (two for four) and Vicky Westover, who connected for a timely triple to tie the game.

Barry stole home in the top of the seventh for the winning run. Defensively, catcher Missi Riddle played a steady game, keeping the Methuen girls at bay with her shotgun arm, while Eileen Griffin made the defensive play of the game, robbing Methuen of at least two runs with a diving catch in leftfield. Briggs chalked up the win, coming in relief of Kim Daniels.

Friday, the freshmen hosted Dracut and again the Tewksbury bats were hot, as the frosh scored in every inning except the first. Linda Barry had two doubles, Vicky Westover had a double and single, Missi Riddle and Heather Coyle each contributed doubles, while Eileen Griffin, Sandy Hennessy and Wendy Gosselin all slapped singles.

Good sound defense has been a factor in the freshmen victories. Again, Riddle's arm proved to be a big factor, cutting down four runners. Laura Briggs pitched up the win, allowing just seven hits, two K's and walking only three. The freshmen entertain Chelmsford McCarthy Junior High Thursday

Division II-B
The Tewksbury Youth Soccer Division II-B, under-14 team hosted undefeated Billerica United Saturday and the final result was 2-1 in favor of the talented Billerica club.

The game was excellently played by both teams from the start. Billerica United capitalized near the end of the first half when a corner kick was converted into a goal of a beautiful head shot.

Tewksbury came out hard in the second half, but again it was Billerica with the break, as they converted from a scramble in front of the net for a 2-0 lead.

Tewksbury finally broke the ice with some excellent pressure, as Scott Thornton blocked a Billerica fullback's attempt to clear the ball, got control slammed it into the lower right corner. Tewksbury continued to maintain pressure, and had one final attempt to tie the game with five seconds left on a penalty shot. The Billerica United goalkeeper, who played an excellent game, moved to his left to stop the shot.

Nario Simao played an excellent game on defense, and Keith Tower, a converted fullback, was impressive at the striker position. Russ Mann played a tough midfield game, helping Tewksbury maintain good offensive pressure.

This Saturday (May 16) Tewksbury will host Bedford, a team they beat at Bedford, 1-0 in their first game. The game will start at 4 p.m. at the Tewksbury Junior High School field.

Tewksbury zone throughout the game. Also playing outstanding games defensively were Sammy Dias and Greg Vanedna. For goalie Mike Fitzpatrick, this was his third shutout.

Tewksbury 3-Concord 2

This past weekend Tewksbury went on the road to play Concord's highly rated team, and with a narrow victory, Tewksbury moved into sole possession of first place in the Middlesex Youth Soccer League. Tewksbury's record now stands at 4-0.

The weather was fair, but clearly the strong wind would affect the game. Concord won the toss and elected to kick off, so Tewksbury chose to play with the wind in the hope of taking an early lead. Tewksbury played well in the first quarter, but could not convert any of the numerous opportunities into goals.

Finally 20 minutes into the game, Peggy Edwards got the scoring started off a pass from Michelle Muise. A few minutes later, Linda Barry picked up a loose ball in front of the net and put it past the goalie. Shortly thereafter, Peggy Edwards scored her second of the day on another loose ball as the score at the half stood at 3-0.

In the second half, Tewksbury adjusted into a defensive posture. Concord did manage to score twice, one goal coming 10 minutes into the half, and the other with two minutes left to play. But the real story was the play of Tewksbury halfbacks Paula Fink, Kelly McDonough, Susan Rheault, Kris Robinson, and Mary Rheault, who had switched to center fullback. These players constantly interfered with Concord's offense just enough to disrupt their continuity. When the ball did get through Tewksbury's forward wall, goalie Nadine Black was equal to the task. Tewksbury should be commended for adjusting to the conditions, and doing what had to be done to win the game.

Tewksbury 4-Billerica 3

April 30, Tewksbury's under-16 girls team traveled to Billerica to make up a game postponed from Easter Sunday. Although they did not realize it at the time, this was to be a game they would remember for the rest of their lives.

The first quarter was marked by good up and down play by both teams, as the Billerica goalkeeper's excellent range repeatedly thwarted Tewksbury's offense before they could get off a good shot. Billerica got on the board first, taking advantage of some hesitation in Tewksbury's defense. Moments later however, Peggy Edwards tied it up with a crisp shot off a cross from the right wing, but Billerica quickly pulled ahead again on a hard shot from the top of the penalty area.

Things were looking pretty bleak for Tewksbury until just before the half, when Michelle Muise dribbled in deep on the left wing and passed back to Susan Rheault in the middle. From there, Sue fired in a long, but accurate shot past the partially screened Billerica goalie to tie the game at 2-2.

Throughout the second half, neither team could capitalize on some good scoring opportunities. Then, with just 10 minutes to play the game, Tewksbury was awarded a corner kick to be taken by Mary Rheault. A Billerica defender managed to block the initial cross, but the ball looped back out toward the corner. Mary, following up her own cross, headed the ball back across the goal where it ricocheted off a Billerica player and dinto the net. Still, Billerica kept the pressure on and tied it up with their best shot of the day with only two minutes left.

Harvard bound

Tewksbury kicked off, and got the ball out to right winger Kathy Sullivan, who brought it down and crossed it toward the middle. Billerica attempted to clear the ball twice, only to be blocked by Michelle Muise. Michelle then picked up the rebound and crossed it over to leftwinger Cheryl Tassinari, who had been held her position and punched in the game winning goal.

Special mention should be made of the fine performances turned in by halfback Kris Robinson and fullback Denise Kirk.

Tewksbury 3-Wakefield 1

The Tewksbury under-16 girls resumed their schedule after a one week layoff (the Easter Sunday game was postponed until April 30 at Billerica). The visiting team from Wakefield was much improved over their previous performance when Tewksbury won, 4-0. Most of the scoring occurred during the first five minutes of the game. Tewksbury struck first when Michelle Fleury pushed a pass from Linda Barry past the Wakefield goalie. Only minutes later, Michelle Muise scored an unassisted goal with a hard shot from the leftwing.

Wakefield responded quickly with a well placed shot off the goal post, and just out of the reach of goalie Marylou Stoddard to make it 2-1. For the remainder of the first half, Tewksbury held a territorial advantage, but the Wakefield goalie blunted every drive.

Only three minutes into the second half, Michelle Muise added an insurance goal off a good cross from rightwinger Kathy Sullivan. The remainder of the game was evenly contested, with Tewksbury's backup goalie Nadine Black making several key saves to preserve the win.

Tewksbury 2-Wilmington 1
Paul McSweeney and Scott Sampson, captains for game five, last week led their team to a hard fought victory over a good Wilmington team.

The first few minutes of the opening half saw Wilmington march down the field and catching Tewksbury goalie Scott Bolton sprawling, as the ball slammed into the net, but that was the only lone goal allowed by Scott, as he made several excellent stops the rest of the way.

Scott Bonney, playing his best game of the young season, boomed a shot from right wing over the Wilmington goalie and into the left corner of the net after receiving a nice pass from Dave Conway. Todd had at least four shots goal-bound, but the excellent Wilmington goalie saved the day for the Wildcats.

Steve Sledz and Ken Drugh played hard and tough, trying several times to crack the Wilmington defense.

Finally, a pretty pass from a crowd in front of the Wilmington net by Dave Cleland set up a charging Lee Sutherland for a right footed shot that gave the Tewksbury team the lead and a victory. Brian Proulx and Brian Foster, the one-two punch of the Tewksbury defense, would not let Wilmington back on track after the first goal.

Pete Kushniek, moved from his left fullback position, made a nice play in the game, running to intercept a loose Wilmington wing on the right side, and sliding in front of the player to save a goal.

Bob Brewer moved up and down his wing, stopping many attacks, while Ron Outridge playing position well, started several surges up the field. Scott Fay also made one great save-slide, tackling the ball out of bounds.

Matt Pinto and Joey Weser kept moving in and out trying to set up Bonney or Sledz for a score. Injured Tom Geraghty cheered the team on.

Record to date - 5-0. Next week - Concord.

Junior Rotarians host New Zealand guests

It was as though some overseas relatives dropped in at the moment all the neighborhood youngsters were being entertained at an ice cream party.

Wilmington Rotary Club on May 6 was celebrating its annual Junior Rotarian Day. It was also hosting a visiting delegation of Rotarians from District 944, New Zealand, at the same time. President Dick Forrest, who ordinarily presides, took a back seat while Junior Rotarian John Gagnon took over the honors, as club president.

During the school year the Wilmington Rotary has a series of high school seniors as their guests. They are called Junior Rotarians. Two Junior Rotarians attend meetings for a month, partake of the luncheons, join in the singing, listen to the speakers, and then pick up the song books at the end of the meeting.

In the course of a school year 10 or 12 of the honor students in the senior class attend the meetings. Some time in May the Junior Rotarians take over for a meeting, for what is generally a fun meeting. The Junior Rotarians lead the singing, and inflict the fines, amid some gentle joking and possibly other activities. The Junior Rotarians collected $64 in fines from their seniors, all of which was turned over to the cancer drive.

The New Zealanders were being led by incoming governor Michael Leggott, a Rotarian from Upper Hutt, a city that is about 20 miles north of Wellington, New Zealand. They are on a three week tour of District 791, an eastern Massachusetts district that includes the Wilmington club.

Among the delegation were a detective sergeant from the Upper Hutt police force, John Nickelson, and Paul Quinn, from Wellington. Mr. Quinn is a Maori, the people who were the natives of New Zealand before the arrival of the white man. He is the national Secretary for Maori Affairs, a position which he likened to being Secretary of Indian Affairs in Washington.

And, when it came time to exchange Rotary flags, the New Zealand members did not present the flag to President Dick Forrest. That man had to stand to one side, while John Gagnon, high school senior, did the honors with incoming governor Michael Leggott, of Upper Hutt, New Zealand.

Two fires on trains

by Ron Morgese

The Wilmington Fire Department had an easy but unusual day Tuesday, answering five calls. Two of those five runs were train fires.

The first train fire Tuesday was a minor one that was extinguished by an engineer using a dry chemical fire extinguisher before firefighters arrived. The train was being moved to another track by Sweetheart Plastics and was owned by the Boston Maine Railroad.

In the second fire, a B. M. passenger train heading to Lowell caught fire at 4:30 in Wilmington Square. Fifty passengers were evacuated from the train during the fire which took almost 20 minutes to extinguish. The fire mainly damaged the engine. The cause is not yet known.

Swapping banners

John Gagnon and guest Michael Leggott of New Zealand continue a Rotary tradition, swapping banners. At left is Richard Forrest, president of Wilmington Rotary.

Wilmington crime watch

by Officer Bill Gable

During the next few weeks I will be offering some tips on preparing your home so you can "help yourself to a happy vacation." If you would like a brochure on tips, please stop by the police station and pick one up. You can make your trips more enjoyable and carefree if you will take a few simple steps to reduce the possibility that your home will be burglarized or vandalized while you are away.

A few days before you leave, notify the post office to hold your mail or arrange for a neighbor to pick it up and hold it. Notify the newspaper carrier to discontinue delivery while you are away. Make arrangements to have your grass cut and watered and have someone pick up those free circulars that are delivered door-to-door. Arrange for a neighbor or relative to watch your home and give them a key. Let them know where you are and how you can be reached in an emergency. Write their phone number down so you can check with them during your trip. Also give them your car description and plate number in case you must be located while traveling between points of interest.

Next week, some more tips on home preparation. Returning to a home that has been broken into is an unpleasant finish to any trip. Never give a burglar an even break!!!

A North Wilmington woman is recovering at home following an accident on Friday morning in East Woburn.

Elaine M. D'Errico of 4 Gowing Road was thrown from her car in the accident. The car took down 22 feet of wooden guardrail, and came to rest on its roof.

She was taken to Choate Memorial Hospital with head injuries, and transferred to Mass. General Hospital, where she was first listed in serious condition.

Her injuries, however, were not as serious as first estimated. She did require 40 stitches on her head, but she was discharged on Tuesday.

Her two-year-old son, Thomas, Jr. escaped injury in the accident.

Wilmington senior topics

Ethel Eliopoulos

Mrs. Ethel Eliopoulos, administrator of the Social Security office in Lowell, will visit the Drop-in Center Thursday afternoon, May 14, from 2 p.m. News regarding cuts in the Social Security system being recommended in Washington should encourage seniors to visit Mrs. Eliopoulos to learn more and have questions answered.

Rep. James Shannon

Representative James Shannon will be at Wilmington Memorial Library on Sat., May 16 at 2 p.m. Seniors who lost escrow money (fuel assistance program) due to mismanagement of the program this year should make an attempt to meet with Mr. Shannon and let their feelings be known to him. Mr. Shannon is also on the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives in Washington. This committee is reviewing cut-backs in the Social Security Program. He should have the opportunity to know how the cut-backs are going to effect individual seniors.

Nurse on hand May 14

Abbie Radley, RN nurse will be in the Drop-in Center Thursday afternoon May 14 to check blood pressure and administer the diabetes test. Diabetes is an illness that can be detected through a blood test before it becomes a serious medical problem.

The Senior Fair is a little better than a week away and there is much to be done. The Arts and Crafts Committee needs help and hopes all the seniors will make an effort to contribute in some way - the fair is intended for all seniors, not those working on the committee. The Arts and Crafts Committee meets Tuesday and Thursday mornings and would greatly appreciate all the help possible.

Dinner at Capt'n Chris

The Council on Aging will be sponsoring a bus trip to Haverhill with dinner at Capt'n Chris Restaurant. This social is planned for Thursday, June 25. The buses will leave the Drop-in Center at 11:15 a.m. and return around 3 p.m. Meal preference must be made when registering for the trip - fish or meat and a $2.00 deposit will be required.

Making the Supermarket a natural source of food

By WILLIAM PACINO

Can you survive your local supermarket? At first glance the typical market, which offers almost 13,000 items, may appear to be a nightmare of foods which contain artificial colors and flavors, chemical preservatives, texture and flavor enhancers, thickening agents and other additives.

But there is hope. Just as calm reasoning usually reveals that there was nothing terrifying about the nightmare after all, careful thought will reveal that wholesome foods are available in your market. By carefully selecting your purchases you can leave your market with a balanced supply of healthy, nutritious food, at reasonable prices.

In the first aisle, select your beverages from a variety of pure, healthful fruit juices such as apple, pineapple, grape, grapefruit, cranberry and tomato. Check the label to make sure that they do not contain artificial additives or unnecessary extra sugar.

For a refreshing change of pace, try non-fat dry skim milk. It is probably one of the most economical sources of protein and calcium available.

For a hot drink, herb teas offer caffeine-free alternatives to black tea. If you cannot break the coffee habit, switch to a decaffeinated brand. Recent analysis of a number of decaffeinated coffees have revealed that the methylene chloride residue - the solvent used to remove the caffeine - is substantially lower than the 10 parts per million allowed by federal regulations. Although they still contain a small amount of residue, if you must drink coffee, drink decaffeinated.

Many healthful breakfast items are available to accompany your morning tea or coffee. Bran cereals with their high dietary fiber content (four grams of dietary fiber per serving), are a good selection. A typical bran cereal serving with one-half cup of skim milk provides only 135 calories and a good amount (about seven grams) of body building protein. Although sugar and salt are added to most cereals, you can read the labels and find some cereals without these ingredients. Oatmeal, farina and cream of wheat are also hearty, nutritious beginnings to you day.

The baking needs aisle is another source of nutritious staples. If you do your baking from scratch, head right to the whole wheat flour. It is made from the entire wheat kernel and is far more nutritious than white flour.

When whole wheat kernels are milled to straight grade white flour, two thirds of the iron, and a substantial amount of the B vitamins (three-fourths of the thiamine and niacin and about two-thirds of the pantothenic acid) are lost. Nearly all of the vitamin E is removed with the germ and outer layers of the kernel.

When you purchase whole wheat flour, buy only enough to fill your needs for a few weeks, since it tends to become rancid. If you cannot use it within a month, store it in the refrigerator or freezer until you are ready for it.

Rye, soy, graham, barley, potato and corn flours, wheat germ, cornmeal and oats can all add nutrition and variety to your baked goods.

When selecting baking powders, try to avoid buying brands containing aluminum sulfate. Several commercial double-acting powders are manufactured without this additive. You can also make your own baking powder by combining one-half teaspoon cream of tartar, one-fourth teaspoon sodium bicarbonate and one-fourth teaspoon cornstarch or arrowroot. This yields one teaspoon of single-acting baking powder.

As you enter the row of beans, grains and spices, you can begin to feel comfortable. Beans are a reliable and economical source of protein, and you can be relatively sure you are serving a completely balanced protein if you combine them with small amounts of animal protein such as milk, cheese, meat or fish.

A half cup of cooked white or red beans contains approximately eight grams of protein, one-half gram fat and only 118 calories. The same amount of porterhouse steak contains twice as much protein, but also contains 84 times as much fat and almost four times as many calories. It costs nearly twice as much to obtain protein from meat.

Beans can be used in almost any dish - casseroles, soups, or side dishes. Consult your cookbooks and use your imagination, and you'll find many pleasing and satisfying ways to use beans in your meals. You'll never tire of the endless variety of canned, dried and sprouted beans - black, black-eye, garbanzo, great northern, kidney, navy, pinto, soy, red and pink.

Peas - green, yellow, split or whole - are also a nutritious selection and can be used in soups, casseroles and side dishes. Brown rice, barley and lentils are other whole foods which can be used in many ways to add nutritious punch to your menus.

When passing by the spices, don't be afraid to try unfamiliar seasonings. Used skillfully, nature's flavors will stimulate appetites and enhance the flavor of food. They add a new dimension to your palate, which is often missed by those who use salt as their main seasoning.

The virtues of fresh fruits and vegetables have been well covered. They contain more vitamins and minerals than their cooked counterparts and more fiber than other foods. From apples to zucchini, you can't go wrong in this section. You may also see alfalfa and mung bean sprouts and tofu (soybean curd or cheese) among the fresh produce. These high protein, low calorie foods are an economical, nutritious addition to your groceries.

When picking up canned fruits, choose the varieties packed in their own juice or in fruit juice without added sugar. Canned vegetables too, are a good bet.

With few exceptions they are free from preservatives and unnecessary food additives and can help stock your pantry.

At the far end of the canned-goods aisle don't overlook the nutrition-packed cans of tuna, salmon, mackerel and sardines, all supplying tasty forms of high-quality protein, vitamins and minerals.

Roving with Dan Ferullo

One-on-one

Psst

Come closer.

I've got some news to relay to you, but I've got to be careful, because the CIA may be around. The news has got to do with the trouble that's going on around the world. How it got started. Who's to blame. How it can be stopped.

I'd like to be able to take credit for what I'm going to tell you, but I can't. The ideas are from some people who are very active in one of those strange-sounding left wing organizations. It's called INFRECKS (the International Federation for the Return of Egalitarianism, Existentialism and a Kool Society), and their current crusade is for the elimination of all wars - even for the threat of war; nuclear, limited or otherwise, and land conflicts - and the loss of millions of innocent lives.

INFRECKS, which is headquartered in a cave somewhere in Death Valley (they claim that if their cause should fail and a nuclear war breaks out, the name Death Valley will become a misnomer because, by corollary, Death Valley would probably be the only place in the continental United States where life would still exist, therefore it should be renamed Living Valley), with satellite groups on major college campuses around the country, believe that the bottom line cause of war is ego. When a power-conscious leader wants to flex the muscles of his office, he makes a threat toward another country. The leader of that country, unwilling to be shamed in front of his people, responds with two flexes, and the conflict starts, often without the people of the two countries having a chance to have their say. Once the battle lines have been drawn, it is the people who are expected to do the defending, while the egomaniacs who do the instigating sit back in ivory towers and "call the shots" and make arrogant, macho claims of victory.

INFRECKS has a simple solution to this injustice: when two leaders decide it's time to flex muscles, let them do the battling. INFRECKS thinks this could be achieved, without endangering innocent citizens, in a variety of ways. For example, the two leaders could sit down to a chess match. The winner would be the victor in the war. Not a single drop of blood has to be shed needlessly!

There is this interesting angle to the proposed INFRECKS solution: with media playing such an important role with the coverage of war, these pre-arranged, non-violent conflicts could be staged as major media events. Instead of seeing lives being annihilated on the seven o'clock news with Dan Rather, we could all tune in to the chess match, say, and cheer our leader on to victory.

Sound boring? Of course it does, and INFRECKS has the answer to this, too. With competitive spirit running rampant in this country (and lots of other, also), a chess match might not be thrilling enough for NBC, HBO, or Madison Square Garden fans. So why not a boxing match? Instead of President Reagan spending so much time worrying about the inadequacy of an all-volunteer army, he could just slip on a pair of boxing gloves and red, white and blue Bill Blass trunks, and jump into the ring with President Leonid Brezhnev of the Soviet Union, and save us all a lot of inconvenience. You've got to admit, even staunch right wingers would find that match-up hard to turn off.

Ah, but then there will always be those who feel that a fight to the death is the only true honorable way an argument the magnitude of a two-man war should end, right? Well, INFRECKS has no objection to an internationally televised duel between two world leaders (censorship arguments are to be left to the Moral Majority, they say). They could choose their weapons: swords, pistols, knives, snowballs. Perhaps laser guns would be more to the liking of tv producers and audiences. Just imagine the pre-duel

wields the brush

Paul LaVoie is Phantom Artist of the Market

By Elaine L. Jones

According to Thomas LaMance, "Talents are not usually dished out in dozen lots. It is for each to take what skill he has and put it to work in the place where he is."

When shopping at Redstone's Star Market, have you ever noticed the beautiful and imaginative murals which adorn the windows of the meat department, and other areas of the store? Perhaps you have wondered, also, not only who the person is who possesses this aptitude, but when he accomplishes his artistry. I discovered, in solving this mystery, a remarkable man, whose natural gift makes the store come alive with happy, colorful pictures. As holidays come and go, the scenes miraculously change, many times overnight. Yet if you were to question Star Market's regular customers, very few would be able to explain how and when the metamorphosis takes place.

Paul LaVoie has been "dressing up" the Star Market with his unique and beautiful three-dimensional murals for about seven years. He has been employed by the store for seventeen years and, obviously, enjoys his job very much. In order to perfect his artistic skills, he often arises at four a.m. He eats a good breakfast, without which he says he cannot function. He arrives at the store between five-thirty and six a.m., and from six to eight, he is an artist. He then works at his regular eight hour a day job as meat caseman. When his work day on the case is finished, he completes his art project. Thus, he becomes the phantom artist where the customers are concerned.

Paul commutes to Stoneham from Lawrence, Mass., each day. The winter weather worries him, but like the U.S. mail, he always comes through. When he knows there is a storm coming, he sets his alarm an hour and a half earlier, to be assured of arriving at the job on time.

Paul is sixty-one years old, of Canadian-French decent, and was raised to believe in the work ethic of an honest day's work for an honest dollar. He was born in Lawrence and educated in Parochial schools. He graduated from Maryvale College. "The family had a meat market warm-up on Inter-Tel (satellite coverage, naturally): supporters of both sides could assess their respective leader's chances of blowing the brains out of the other guy, including complete computer analysis and predictions of possible outcomes (six inches from the heart, right on the button, hitting below the belt, even the possibility of a misfire). Then the two leaders could dress up in Raphael tuxes and go at each other. Why, subscription television would soar! And what a tourist trade could be generated if the event were to be held in some glamorous place like Camino Real.

INFRECKS isn't even adverse to the two of them going out into the middle of a big field, digging a couple of foxholes, and then proceeding to toss hand grenades at one another until somebody emerges a winner. (Maybe nobody would emerge.) INFRECKS feels any of the aforementioned alternatives is better than the needless loss of millions of lives. Lives that couldn't care less about the egos of their leaders. INFRECKS will be fighting a lot for their proposal, because their belief is that it's the only way wars can be eliminated for good. Come to think of it, even those one-on-one confrontations would probably end up extinct in a few decades.

After all, what leader in his right mind would want to face humiliation - even death - in front of three or four million viewers of Home Box Office?

Carlos Anderson

How did Enchilada King do it?

By Ron Scherer

When Carlos Anderson was 25 years old, his hot dog and taco chain in Mexico City went bankrupt. Mr. Anderson hot-footed it out of town, avoiding his creditors.

Today, Mr. Anderson is the undisputed Enchilada King of Mexico. His company, Central Anderson's SA, operates 37 full-service restaurants in Mexico and the United States and expects to open up eight more of them by the end of the year. Mr. Anderson says the credit card companies tell him he runs the largest full-service restaurant chain in Mexico. Even by US standards, a spokesman for a US restaurant chain says, the Anderson chain would be large. (Since the company is privately held, it doesn't disclose financial results.)

Lotte Mendelsohn, a radio commentator for the popular station XEVIP in Mexico City, calls Mr. Anderson "canny and charming." She notes, "He's a real showman." And Michael G. Taylor, president of Textiles Morelos and Nobilis Lees in Mexico City, subsidiaries of Burlington Industries, says that what makes Mr. Anderson's restaurants successful is their ability to attract the growing Mexican middle class.

Although the bulk of the eating establishments are in Mexico, Mr. Anderson and his partner, Charlie Skipsey, have also expanded to the US, Spain, and Brazil. In the future, Mr. Anderson says he will open up a restaurant in Macao, where, he says, "We just hope to get back the price of our plane tickets."

Anderson's US forays have met with mixed success. In Los Angeles, Tiburon, and San Mateo, Calif., the restaurants fill up their parking lots. But an attempt to establish an eatery in Dallas fell flat and the restaurant closed quickly. Looking back on the Dallas experience, Mr. Anderson says he knew before the restaurant opened that it wouldn't succeed. "I really should have said that things were wrong," he comments. "It was a study in errors. The location was wrong, and the management team didn't grasp the way we do business." He adds, however, that "the mortality rate of restaurants in Dallas is huge."

Most of the Anderson restaurants don't fail. This is in large part because of a unique management technique which Anderson calls "owner's eyes." He explains, "When the owner of a restaurant looks at a table, he notices there is no salt shaker; when an employee looks at the table, he doesn't notice it." Thus, he gives a share of the profits to many of the employees who don't get tips. The maitre d', bartenders, and cooks all benefit if the restaurant is a success.

Anderson says that no two deals he makes are the same. But generally, he says, "We seldom build new restaurants; we buy bankrupt restaurants and repackage them." Then he lines up bank financing for the new enterprise and finds new management from among his previous successes. The waiters and management often speak excellent English, since they were educated at private schools in the US.

"There are a lot of kids whose fathers are lawyers, doctors, or businessmen who are not day people and their parents don't understand that. But I put them to work at my restaurants and they are great, since they have sat on the other side of the table enough to know what good service is." (For those curious Mr. Anderson's father was American; his mother, Mexican. He founded his first restaurant, "Si Como No," when he was 18.)

Another reason his restaurants have been successful is that they are mostly in vacation spots. He has three restaurant-discos in Acapulco; four establishments in Mazatlan; and two restaurants in Cuernavaca.

Food is not the only drawing card for the restaurants. People go to them to have a good time and be seen. There is even a rumor that Henry Kissinger has stood in line outside Carlos 'n Charlie's in Acapulco waiting to get in. (None of the restaurants take reservations.) And Miss Mendelsohn says that Anderson's, the flagship restaurant in Mexico City, has become a big nighttime spot for singles. During the day, employees from the nearby US Embassy mingle with Citibank's debonair banking staff as they feast on a potent ceviche. For Carlos Anderson, it's a long way from "Si Como No."

Students, teachers sought for clerical work

Office skills may land summer job

"If you possess office skills, you've got a good chance at landing a summer job." So says Mitchell S. Fromstein, president of Manpower, Inc., the world's largest temporary service firm.

"In order to replace our office workers who 'retire' for the summer to care for their children, we'll need about 25,000 college students or teachers to keep up with the demand for our services.

"Students may not consider themselves 'office material', but many will be surprised to find they have the skills in demand. We are able to discover and develop 'hidden skills' that many never know they have. And office work is an excellent way to get experience in the business world, which is a big plus for those graduating in June," Fromstein added.

Applicants are interviewed, tested and assigned to work that closely matches their interests and aptitudes.

"In a single summer, our temporary employee may work in one office or in several, and all the assignments will be comfortable and enjoyable," said Fromstein.

While U.S. Department of Labor estimates are still incomplete, it is expected that the job market this summer will be tighter than one year ago, when approximately 28,000,000 sought summer employment. Most available jobs will pay the current $3.35 minimum wage, or close to it. "If you have the skills Manpower is looking for, you can generally earn a higher wage working temporary assignments," Fromstein said.

Although Manpower also assigns industrial, technical and health care temporaries, most of the summer opportunities are in office related positions, such as typists, secretaries, billing clerks, assistant bookkeepers and office machine operators. Most college students possess some skills that can be used on temporary office assignments.

To apply for summer work as a temporary, contact the local Manpower Temporary Services office (listed in the White Pages) or use a 24-hour toll-free Employment Hotline at (800) 331-1000. By using the toll-free number, students will be able to schedule an interview now with the Manpower office closest to their hometown in order to get a head start on the increasing struggle for summer jobs. A subsidiary of the Parker Pen Company, Manpower annually provides employment to 600,000 persons through its 900 offices in 31 countries. Office services account for more than half of the jobs at which its temporary work force is engaged.

College and vocational students often possess skills, hidden skills, which qualify them for office work, as measured by the Manpower skills measurement system.

The skills measurement system measures applicants' positive work attitude, dependability and ability to follow instructions. The system also includes specific skill tests in typing, letter preparation, dictation and other office skills.

Listed below are examples of those hidden skills which students most often possess.

...Liberal Arts — General office, junior typist, statistical typist, invoice typist, statistic clerk, receptionist, receptionist-switchboard, duplicating machine operator, addressograph operator.

...Business Administration-Accounting — Adding Machine-10 key operator, payroll clerk, assistant bookkeeper, accounting clerk (junior and senior).

...Computer Sciences — CRT typist, control clerk, magnetic tape librarian.

...Marketing — Demonstrators, detailer, survey interviewers, comparison shoppers, samplers.

...Vocational-Trades — Painter, tradesman's assistant.

VA facts

...Q. — If a veteran with a Veterans Administration National Service Life Insurance policy selected monthly payments for settlement of his insurance proceeds to his beneficiary, can the beneficiary select a lump sum payment instead?

A. — No. The law provides that a lump sum settlement will only be available to a beneficiary if specifically selected by the insured. This is true even if the insured fails to make any selection of payment option.

...Q. — If a veteran dies before a home loan guaranteed by the Veterans Administration is repaid, will the VA pay off the balance?

A. — No. The surviving spouse or other co-borrower must continue making payments. However, mortgage life insurance is available from private companies.

years ago," said Paul, "and of, course, we were all expected to work in the market, which my Dad started for us. There were four boys in the family. My Dad didn't have much of an education, himself — he worked in a papermill as a supervisor. But he wanted all of us to do well in life."

Completely unaware that he possessed a latent talent in the field of art, Paul said, "I did buy a set of brushes during this period, to use when we had to make signs, such as: 'Pork Chops — $1.99 a pound'. I worked in the meat market for thirteen years. Then, when the war broke out, I went into the service." He was in the 42nd Infantry Division during the "big one, WW II," to quote Archie Bunker. "That was under Patton and Patch," explained Paul, "the Rainbow Division." He was one of twenty out of three hundred to make it home. "When I came back, we found that four brothers trying to feed out of one store was impossible. We were all going to starve to death. So, two of us branched out. One of my brothers started a corner variety store, which required very long working hours. I didn't want that, because I love my family and I enjoy being with them and participating with them. I just couldn't see myself working from seven to eleven in a store. So, at this time, I decided to join the 'big fellows', which in those days, were the small superettes. I served in the capacity of meat manager and store manager in three different stores. Eventually, I went to work for Star Market. This was about seventeen years ago."

As a meat cutter, Paul had no contact with the customers. Then, he replaced a caseman who had worked out front. This is when Star realized the value of his customer service abilities. From then on, he worked as caseman, dealing directly with the customers. His thorough knowledge of all meat cuts, plus the fact that he was knowledgeable in the area of cooking, made him a natural in serving the customers. He began to design charts in this connection to help people. He says, "I enjoy people of all ages and have an infinite amount of patience."

Regarding his art work, Paul has no formal training. His talent is "God-given" and appreciated and admired by those of us who "cannot draw a straight line". Just to view this one man "art show" makes the chore of grocery shopping much more pleasant.

"Until about seven years ago," said Paul, "I had never done any painting of any kind. I was asked once to make some signs for the Produce Department. Instead of just printing the word 'cucumber', I drew a picture of three or four cucumbers, and colored them up, to make them pop out on the sign. They were really pleased with this approach. Then I did the same thing with the oranges. This is the way it started, by just making these small illustrations."

Paul has had three different chain stores who are very anxious to utilize his creative abilities, but his loyalty remains with Star Market until retirement. He feels they have been very fair with him, and have shown their appreciation monetarily, as well as verbally. Paul said, "I have had people come in here asking me to do art work. One lady asked me to do a bedroom for her children. She wanted 'big bird', that type of thing, on the wall," he laughed. "Then, there's a hairdresser up the road who wants me to 'do her windows'. I have to say that I'm sorry, but I just can't find the time. Of course, those would be fun things to do."

The ideas are completely his own. When he is asked to do something for Easter, or some other holiday, it's up to him to create. He tries, now, to plan ahead. When special times are coming up, such as: Mother's Day, Memorial Day or Cookouts for the Fourth of July, he then begins to "dream up" something appropriate. "Sometimes," said Paul, "I'll see things from six or seven sources which I will put together."

Unlike other artists, Paul doesn't mind revealing information as to materials and methods. He uses in developing the creative scenes which he does so effectively. "I went around to stores and asked questions of people who did this type of thing," he said, "and no one wanted to tell me anything. I don't know why, because when people ask me, I just tell them the truth. I use just plain water color. If I painted in oil, there would be a problem in washing it down; so after trying all kinds of things, I found this works best. I do use special water colors. They are bright colors, mostly luminous colors, which convey warmth and also catch the eye. I paint from both the front and back of the glass windows, which produces a three-dimensional effect. All of my paintings are happy paintings."

Paul speaks warmly of his wife, Lucia, whom he married forty years ago on Memorial Day. He says she is the one and only sweetheart he has ever had. A close-knit family, they have two grown children: A married daughter, Helen Bailey, who lives in Andover, and is Educational Co-ordinator at the Lawrence Eagle Tribune, (Helen has three children), and a son, Richard, who is a resident of North Conway, New Hampshire, and works as Vice President and Senior Mortgage Officer of the White Mountain National Bank.

In describing his home life, Paul said, "Every night my wife and I jump on our bikes and take off. We were bicycling long before the fad began. We love dancing; ballroom and a little disco, which we learned from the kids. Over the years, we have won several prizes for our dancing." They have lived in their present home for twenty-six years, a house which Paul built. He is a do-it-yourself person, who likes expensive things, but could not always afford to buy them. So, he began to buy books and learn how to make things he wanted, and developed the habit of doing it himself.

When asked how he would like to be remembered, Paul said, "My whole life has been centered on my family. It seems that everything I do is for them. I'd like to be remembered as having helped them through life in a way that would allow them to avoid any pitfalls that I've experienced — therefore, enabling them to have a better life."

Butterfield, vice president of operations for the San Francisco-based company.

Magic Pan commissioned the Braille translations of its menus from the volunteers at the Johanna Bureau for the Blind and Visually Handicapped, Inc. of Chicago.

The availability of the menus is part of Magic Pan's overall policy of identifying and responding to specific customer attitudes and needs. The company owns and operates 86 restaurants in major cities across the U.S. It is a division of The Quaker Oats Company.

IRS abatement

Taxpayers who are assessed a penalty because of a tax delinquency, and feel the penalty is unwarranted, may, in many cases, appeal the penalty. Herbert B. Mosher, District Director for IRS in Massachusetts, said:

Tax bills contain information on how to request elimination of a penalty charge. Generally, the first step is to correspond with the appropriate IRS service center. If the service center rejects the request, the taxpayers will receive a letter explaining the reason for the rejection. The letter will also include information on further appeal procedures, along with the name and phone number of an IRS Appeals Office official.

For additional information on the appeals procedure, obtain the free IRS Publication 586A, "The Collection Process," by calling the IRS Forms-Tax Information number listed in the telephone directory.

Merrimack Valley Textile Museum

Join a sheep-shearing

"There's a technique to throwing a sheep on its back," says Chris Cerino, a freelance sheep shearer from Ipswich, Massachusetts. "If you don't do it right, you can throw out your back."

Cerino will be demonstrating his technique at the Merrimack Valley Textile Museum's annual sheep-shearing and spinning bee, to be held Sunday, May 17, on the Common in old North Andover center. The free, rain-or-shine event will also feature sheepdog trials, a textile craft fair, and demonstrations of historic machinery.

Most people might shy from the task of getting a boy into a barber's chair, let alone clipping the wool from a 200-pound ram. But, Cerino says, "It's not all that hard, although you do have to practice a bit. After you get the sheep on its back, you hold it with your knees. It takes one hand to hold the shears, and another to stretch out the sheep's skin so you don't cut it." Depending on who's doing the job, a shearing can take from two minutes to half an hour, with an average of eight pounds of raw wool to show for the effort. Cerino, who handles a good part of Essex County's shearing chores, takes from five to ten minutes to give an animal its new spring look.

Chris Cerino uses electric clippers. But Kevin Ford of Newton favors manual shears, the design of which has changed little since Roman times. On May 17, Ford will demonstrate the shearing skills he learned during a 1975 trip to Ireland, and which are still very much in demand in New England and many other parts of the world.

"When you shear manually (the clippers Ford uses resemble grass shears), you can work right in the field, away from electrical outlets," says Ford. "Also, you leave more stubble on the sheep, which is important to animals exposed to extremes of weather."

Ford, who shears 500 to 600 sheep each spring, notes that the manual process takes roughly two to three times as long as electric clipping, but that "the very fastest can still do a sheep in five minutes."

Regardless of the tools they favor, sheep shearers all have to deal with a creature that is hardly small, and which can sometimes be recalcitrant. "Most sheep stay put once you get them on their backs," Chris Cerino says. "Usually, it's the animal most afraid of people that will lie most still once he's flipped over. The 'pet' sheep is the one likely to raise a fuss, because he isn't afraid."

Sheep-shearing demonstrations begin on the Common at 1 p.m. and continue to 2:30, with another half-hour session starting at 4:30.

The next step in making woollens is transforming the raw fleece into yarn, and a highlight of the Textile Museum's May event will be a competitive demonstration of the ancient technology of spinning. Participants in the "spinning bee" will be given identical quantities of fleece, which they must prepare and spin upon their own hand-and-foot-powered wheels. Beginning at 1 p.m., the spinners will work in full view of visitors for one hour, after which their yarn will be judged according to overall quality.

Merrimack Valley Textile Museum's Tenth Annual Sheep Shearing Festival is expected to draw hundreds of visitors to North Andover's Old Center again on Sunday, May 17. Among the special events of the afternoon will be demonstrations of sheep shearing techniques, shown here.

"Quantity — the length of the yarn spun during the bee — will count only in the event of a tie," says Tom Leavitt, the museum's director. At 4 p.m., cash prizes will be awarded to the winners.

The Merrimack Valley Museum possesses a fine tool and machinery collection, and throughout the afternoon, museum staff members and retired hands from the area's famous mills will use this equipment to demonstrate the spinning and weaving techniques used in the mass production of woolen cloth. One gallery will feature pre-industrial equipment and methods, while another houses examples of the intricate, swift-shuttled power looms that changed the face of the textile industry, New England, and the world in the 19th century.

Just as sheep are indispensable to the manufacture of woollens, another animal, the Border Collie, has for a thousand years been indispensable to the herding of sheep. And just as the spinners will be given a chance to compete on May 17, so will the Collies, in trials to be held from 2:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Border Collies are small (25 to 50 pounds) dogs that look nothing at all like the shaggy-haired breed most people think of when they hear "sheepdog", but they are bred to develop acute natural herding instincts. "By the age of two months," says Nancy Hayes, a Hopedale, Massachusetts breeder involved in setting up the May trials, "A Border puppy will attempt to herd anything that moves."

How does a sheepdog trial work? There are three main ingredients — the dog, his handler, and a flock of three to five sheep, all arrayed on an open field. Dog and handler are together at the beginning of the trial, and the sheep are at the field's opposite end. On verbal command, the dog begins a looping approach, the "outrun". He comes upon the sheep from behind, driving them towards the handler in — ideally — a beeline known as the "fetch." Then things get tricky.

After reaching the handler, who must remain in a prescribed circle and rely only upon spoken commands, the dog begins his "drive", which takes the sheep through a series of two gates, and into a pen. The first gate can be anywhere from 20 to 60 feet away from the handler; all the while, the dog is at the heels of the sheep, keeping them together for the homeward leg of the course. One object is for the dog to keep the sheep herded in a tight unit, which, says Nancy Hayes, is "virtually impossible" if the animals are not from the same flock. Another goal is to cover the entire route in a series of straight or near-straight lines.

Awards to outstanding dogs and handlers will be given at 4 p.m.

Throughout the day, items such as handspun yarns and handwoven textiles will be on sale at a craft fair on the Common. The Museum will also invite individuals wishing to sell sheep or raw fleece to bring their wares and stock (previous registration required).

The North Andover Boosters' Club will sell sandwiches and beverages at a tent on the Common all afternoon.

be conducted for 10 weeks, four days per week (Monday through Thursday), from 8:30 a.m. — 3:30 p.m. at Newbury's air-conditioned, 921 Boylston Street campus in the Back Bay section of Boston. Enrollment in each program will be limited to 25 participants.

Says college President Edward J. Tassinari: "We have had tremendous success working with adults who have re-entered the work force after raising a family, or losing their jobs to changing technology."

"Through these timely, new programs we are simply adding a new dimension — providing alternative career opportunities for highly productive individuals experiencing the trauma of displacement from an apparently well-established job."

Participants in each of the three programs will be introduced to the basic elements of their career choices and move quickly to the comprehensive development of practical, job-related skills. Through classroom instruction and guest lectures by practicing professionals, students completing a program should become proficient in subject knowledge and be prepared to accept a position in that industry.

Newbury's Career Planning and Placement Office will also assist participants in seeking new employment.

Individuals who are uncertain about their future because of Proposition 2 1/2 and who wish to prepare for new, business-oriented careers should contact the Admissions Office, Newbury Junior College, 921 Boylston Street, Boston, Mass. 02115, (617) 262-9350, for further details.

Belmont Hill breaks summer co-ed barrier

Belmont Hill School, one of Greater Boston's most academically prestigious college preparatory schools, will initiate a co-ed summer study program this year for the first time in its history.

Announced by Christopher Wadsworth, headmaster of Belmont Hill, the six-week summer school will offer a varied curriculum including the traditional academics, English for all grades, intermediate and beginner French, Spanish and Latin, U.S. History, Psychology and Philosophy.

Other subjects will include Third World Area Studies, Media, Photography, Introductory and Intensive Computer, Business (management and investment) and Typing. Based upon demand, the Belmont Hill Summer School may offer courses in Basic Science and Art.

A special Math course for students who wish to take the Scholastic Aptitude Test section of the College Entrance Examination Board will be available, along with intensive courses in Math Review, several levels of Algebra and Geometry.

In making the announcement, Wadsworth said, "Belmont Hill is well-known for the quality education it provides its students. This year we felt there was a need to offer a series of summer courses not only to our students but also to boys and girls from surrounding communities who may have limited summer academic opportunities.

"The variety of courses offered in this program will serve the needs of junior and senior high school students who desire further academic enrichment but have been limited because of lack of time or opportunity during a regular school year."

The faculty has been selected from quality independent schools including the Winsor School as well as from the regular Belmont Hill School teaching community.

The program has been organized by Blair Hawley, a senior member of the Belmont Hill faculty, Chairman of the Professional Growth Committee and Director of the Belmont Hill Summer School. Deputy Director is Jan Stewart, admissions director of the Belmont Day School.

To ensure each student receiving individual attention, class sizes will be limited to 14; over-enrolled classes will be divided to maintain the academic standard. Although admissions is open, references from a student's home school faculty or guidance office are recommended.

The academic sessions begin June 22 and will run through July 31 with classes scheduled between 8:15 A.M. and 12:45 P.M., Monday through Friday. For further information, those interested may write Belmont Hill Summer School, 350 Prospect Street, Belmont, Ma. 02178, or telephone 484-4410, for the Curriculum Brochure and Application Form.

4-H camp Leslie opens July 5th

Bruce Waybright, Director of the 4-H Camp Leslie, has announced that the camp will open its 43rd season on July 5th, for six weeks. Application forms for youngsters between the ages of eight through fourteen may be obtained by calling 233-1539, or writing to Bruce Waybright, 267 Walnut Street, Saugus, Mass. 01906.

A non-profit organization, Camp Leslie is maintained for the benefit of 4-H members and other youth, and is open to the public without regard to race, color or national origin. Campers will be accepted for a one or two week period.

Located on Pentuck Pond (off Rt. 97), Georgetown, Mass. the camp includes craft skills, sports, archery, tennis, riflery and nature studies. Waterfront activities are under the direct supervision of qualified waterfront personnel, and include swimming classes for all campers. Special boating periods are held, with instruction in the use of a canoe, sailboat and row boat. Canoe trips are taken on the Ipswich River, for qualified campers. Water Carnivals are held on Saturday, when weather permits. General swims are held daily.

Things of the past?

Carousels caught in circle

By Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian News Service

What is made of wood, is painted more colors than the rainbow, has thousands of legs that never go anywhere, is found all over the United States and is disappearing?

The 284 hand-carved carousels left in America provide the answer to this particular riddle. But the subject of merry-go-rounds raises more questions than might be supposed.

On the National Mall in Washington, D.C., a carousel is once again spinning in celebration of the sunny days of spring and summer. More than a decade ago, a carousel was placed there by the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, S. Dillon Ripley, as a "living extension of the museums."

But even as the carousel in the nation's front yard whirls merrily, an ominous trend continues across the country. Once, thousands of carousels were to be found on America's fairgrounds, playgrounds and beaches. They were bright lures dangled at the end of streetcar lines, as trolley companies built amusement parks to encourage riders. Today, a fraction of these hand-carved wooden treasures of yesteryear remain. And the number diminishes yearly.

For the last seven years, 10 to 20 carousels have been lost each year. In most cases, they have been dismantled; the individual animals have been sold off one by one. Barbara Fahs Charles, a Washington, D.C., designer of museum exhibitions and an expert on the history of the American carousel, calls the trend "seven years of bad luck."

Most people love merry-go-rounds because they rode them as children. Charles became interested in carousels when she had one for a downstairs neighbor. She lived for a time in an apartment over the Santa Monica Pier carousel, made famous in the movie, "The Sting." This 1922 hand-carved piece of Americana is currently being restored and will reopen soon.

Often, however, a carousel's fate is quite different. "In the past decade, carousel figures have become highly collectible, easily tripling in price — with the more unusual or finely carved rising the fastest," Charles says. "As the demand for figures has increased, whole operating carousels have decreased in significant numbers."

Is there reason to mourn the loss of merry-go-rounds in America? Would a child's ride be that much missed? The fact of the matter is, the carousel was not created for children. Kids and carousel got together relatively late in the carousel's long and colorful history.

The earliest known visual record of a "carousel" is a 1,500-year-old Byzantine bas-relief depicting riders spinning in baskets tied to a center pole. Down through the centuries, the carousel was known by many names and in various forms in such far-flung parts of the world as India, Turkey, Europe, Mexico and America.

The first carousel recorded in this country was made in New England around 1800. But the carousel industry got its real start, albeit a rocky one, when young Gustav Dentzel hung out his sign in Philadelphia — "G.A. DENTZEL, STEAM AND HORSEPOWER CAROUSEL BUILDER — 1867."

In 1870, Dentzel took his first carousel on tour and stopped at Richmond, Va. A group of boys gathered round, but instead of hopping aboard, pelted the carousel with stones. When Dentzel protested to police standing idly by, they informed him, "Mister, if you want business, don't ever play 'Marching Through Georgia' in the South."

As new forms of power became available, carousels were turned first by steam, then by electricity. Once, they were even turned by coconuts.

On that occasion in 1894, an American merry-go-round salesman, Joseph D. Guinn, arrived in Tahiti with two carousels powered by steam, only to find that no wood or coal was available to fuel the engines. In his memoirs, Guinn wrote, "We fired with coconuts. I stayed there 40 days and did very well — taking in as much as $625 in a single day."

The carousel business in America was indeed profitable in its golden age from 1880-1930. In this period there were at least 19 carousel-carving shops. Each shop had its unique style, and its individual carvers had their signature touches.

Of course, in the true American spirit, an idea was "borrowed" now and then. "Carvers took styles from each other. They crept under canvases to see what others were doing," says Nina Fraley, a carousel restoration expert who began her career at age 10 painting fences in her father's amusement park.

Carousel carvers had a greater job cut out for them than sculpting the blocks of raw wood they faced. They were challenged to create instant fantasy. Before choosing a steed, a rider would decide what role to play — knight, princess, cowboy, circus performer or hunter. The carvers created mounts for them all.

The special carvings on an old wooden carousel are detailed, fanciful, often historically accurate and always on the right side, or "romance" side, faces the onlookers and the approaching rider. There was no point in wasting all that work on the side nobody would see.

The Philadelphia Toboggan Company carvers created horses with historically correct coats of medieval armor and weapons. Master carver D.C. Muller was a student of the American Civil War, and his military horses wear authentic cavalry gear. One Dentzel tiger sports a full-length portrait of Teddy Roosevelt stalking his prey, pince-nez and all.

Carver Marcus Charles Illions adorned his horses with portraits of the famous such as Abraham Lincoln — and himself; at least one of his horses bears a self-portrait. Another Coney Island carver, Charles Carmel, honored his wife with such a portrait on horseback. Charles Loeff created total carousel environments. He designed buildings with stained glass windows which cast a glow on, brilliant white horses with gilded manes and trappings encrusted with mirrored jewels that caught the light. The whole was a giant kaleidoscope.

The "Brooklyn Baroque" rose-bedecked steeds of carvers Stein & Goldstein are massive, aggressive chargers with their ears back and teeth bared. Herschell-Spiller carvers created smaller, gentler creatures that would appeal to children. One such delight, a frog, was outfitted in a jacket, bow tie and short pants. "Colonel" Parker's carvers gave their all with Americans: flags, eagles, Indian heads, six-shooters, sunflowers and corn — on cobs.

The golden age of carousels ended with the Depression as parks closed in response to the failing economy. After World War II, amusement parks and merry-go-rounds experienced a brief revival, but by that time the art of the carousel carver had largely been lost. Metal and, later, fiberglass animals replaced the exquisitely carved wooden creatures.

In the 1950s, '60s and '70s television and rock concerts replaced the fantasies of a more innocent day. Many parks, often on prime real estate, were sold to developers.

Today, the old wooden carousels left in America are caught in a vicious circle. Groups and individuals argue about how best to save the survivors. Preservation efforts, however, create publicity about their location and value, which, in turn, creates new interest among those more concerned with profit than with history, art or just plain fun.

Fred Fried, a New York City carousel conservationist, folk art historian and author of "A Pictorial History of the Carousel," would put up a sign in front of the carousel summarizing its future in America. It would read, "IN DANGER."

Marianne Stevens, who restores and sells carousels in New Mexico, and tries to keep them together as operating units, thinks that they can be operated profitably. "If a carousel is in a good location, it will pay its way."

For one Berkeley, Calif., youngster, the issue was neither black nor white, but purple — at least his prose was. A few years ago, when he heard that the Tilden Park merry-go-round was about to be taken out of the park and sold, he wrote, "Dear Tilden Park: If you take the Merry-Go-Round away, I will hold my breath until I turn purple."

Fortunately, the boy will grow up with a normal skin color. The Berkeley community with a little help from its friends in local, state and national government, purchased, restored and got on the National Register of Historic Places its horses, giraffes, roosters, zebras and frogs plus a lion, tiger, dragon, deer, goat, pig, cat, dog and stork.

Where are carousels?

The total number of carousels in the United States, according to a 1979 census of the National Carousel Association, was 322. A 1981 update revealed only 284 all-wood, hand-carved carousels left in America. Approximately 15 percent of these are in storage, and another 5 percent only operate on one or two occasions during the year. Consequently, for a nation of 225 million people, there are about 225 operating wooden carousels.

Sometimes a carousel disappears overnight, sold to a dealer and disassembled before a community has an opportunity to react to its impending loss. Last year alone, 19 of these treasures

Making sense of unheard world

The carousel animals go round and round, dipping and rising as the children holding tightly whoop and shriek with glee. To passersby, these are just youngsters at play, enjoying a sunny day and the Smithsonian's carousel on the National Mall in Washington, D.C.

But in fact, these are children at work. And the museum's carousel is actually a "classroom," its animals serving as objects for teaching language to young people who have hearing impairments.

Plug your ears, pretend you're a 7-year-old and you might begin to understand the problem. Children with normal hearing are constantly stimulated by language and sound. Every day, they hear their parents chatting, radios and TV sets blaring, playmates shouting. But hearing-impaired children, even those whose parents have learned how to communicate with them, are deprived of this stimulation.

As a result, many of these children have a hard time understanding just what communication is. Many do not understand fully that sign language, finger spelling or lip reading can be used to ask for things, respond to commands or questions and relate ideas and feelings to others.

That's where carousels and the more typical museum artifacts — from seashells to sculpture — can help, says Janice Majewski, the Smithsonian's coordinator for special education.

"Museums," she says, "can help remedy many language difficulties, not by abstractions and theories, but with specific 'hands-on' lessons that exercise and develop students' abilities to use language."

At the Smithsonian, Majewski conducts week-long, museum-based programs each summer to help hearing-impaired children learn to clarify the meanings of words, which in turn helps reinforce the process of learning itself and the art of communication.

Each lesson takes place at a different museum, the National Zoo or a Smithsonian research facility and focuses on one new concept. And every lesson involves making something, so the children have an object to show and talk about when they go home.

In one program, for instance, Majewski has used a small exhibit of late 19th and early 20th century carousel animals in the National Museum of American History to teach the difficult concept of "personality." First, utilizing a combination of communication methods, including sign language, she reads a story about a carousel. At the same time, she introduces new vocabulary words, using cards and pictures.

The children then use the words as they discuss why the characters in the story chose particular animals to ride. Practicing with

Burlington Players ready "Lion in Winter", add new faces to their cast

The Burlington Players, currently in rehearsal for their production of "The Lion in Winter" have added a number of talented new faces to supplement their more familiar cast of actors and actresses.

Edward Coutu, who hails from Stoneham, brings to the Players a multifaceted background as an actor and choreographer. While at Stoneham High School he appeared in their productions of "Dracula", "Ten Little Indians", "The Haunting of Hill House", "The Claw", "Farewell to Galatea", "Jocko", "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Music Man". He has worked with the Stoneham Summer Theatre for the past year to choreograph their first annual Benefit Dinner which will feature an original musical revue, and the Jr. High School's current production of "Music Man" has also benefitted from his choreographic talents. This past summer Ed participated in his first community theatre effort with the Colonial Chorus in their production of "Godspell". His role as Philip, King of France in "The Lion in Winter" will be his first as a member of the Burlington Players.

Donald Suthard, a familiar figure for the past five years with the Burlington Teen Workshop, has been a tireless performer in many of their productions. His credits include stunts as choreographer for the Children's Workshop of which he is a graduate. He has appeared at the Town & Country Playhouse in Salem, N.H. in "Gypsy" and "Elizabeth of New York", and was a performer in "The Most Happy Fella" with the Chelmsford Music Company. He has been dancing for 12 years, and is a member of the Burlington High School Chorus. He has appeared in the BHS productions of "Anything Goes", "Schubert's Last Serenade", "Madwoman of Chailot", "The Little Foxes", "Mad Breakfast", and their most recent production "Guys and Dolls". He is currently Vice President of the BHS Drama Club. Don's role as John in "The Lion in Winter" will be his first role with the Burlington Players.

Maura McCarthy lives in the Lowell area and a graduate from the University of Lowell with a BA in English. While at the University she participated in their productions of "Godspell", "Jesus Christ Superstar", and "Oh Dad, Poor Dad". Maura's many talents extend beyond acting to singing and dancing. Maura has an avid interest in dancing and theatre; has studied dancing for 15 years, has studied acting, and hopes to enter a graduate program in Theatre Education and Performance at Emerson College this fall. Maura has been involved in both the Delphic Drama Studio and Patchwork Theatre groups in Lowell, and appeared in a large number of their productions.

Among these were "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof", "The Seahorse", "The Good Doctor", "The World of Carl Sandburg", "Last of the Red Hot Lovers", "Peter Pan", "Alice in Wonderland", "No Sex Please, We're British", and "Chamber Music". Maura's role as Alais in "The Lion in Winter" marks her debut with the Burlington Players.

The "Lion in Winter" will be presented on June 13, 19 and 20 at the Marshall Simonds Middle School in Burlington.

A capsule look at cinema

NEW RELEASE

THIEF (R) — James Caan, Tuesday Weld. (Drama) A diamond thief has delusions of respectability, and wants to pull one more job before settling down with wife, kids and backyard hammock. But the crooked cops and crooked crooks won't let him. This is a gloomy, violent, foul-mouthed film — unpleasant people doing unpleasant things in an unpleasant way. GRADE: C-minus

GENERAL RELEASE

ALL NIGHT LONG (R) — Gene Hackman, Barbra Streisand, Diane Ladd. (Romantic Comedy) This is another in the current rash of flimsily plotted stories of marriage and love and middle-aged wanderlust. It is better than most because of witty direction (by Jean-Claude Trueman) and Hackman's superb portrayal. But it is hard to believe Streisand as a femme fatale. Still, it's all pleasant and mildly diverting. GRADE: B

EXCALIBUR (R) — Nicol Williamson, Nigel Terry, Helen Mirren. (Romantic adventure) This is a retelling of the classic story of King Arthur, his knights, Merlin the magician and all those legendary folk. Some of it is murky, but life then must have been murky — as well as bloody, violent, sometimes foolish and often mysterious. Williamson is magnificent as Merlin, and the film is always fascinating. GRADE: B

FORT APACHE, THE BRONX (R) — Paul Newman, Ken Wahl, Edward Asner. (Police Drama) This is certainly one of the finest about New York's finest, or any police force for that matter. Based on truth, it is a look at the workings of the police in a Bronx precinct so wild it's nicknamed Fort Apache. And one cop — Newman — is faced with a terrible decision. This is first-rate film-making all the way. GRADE: A

HARDLY WORKING (PG) Jerry Lewis. (Comedy) A bumbling out-of-work clown finds permanent employment and true love in the U.S. Postal Service. Lewis co-authored and directed this, his return to the big screen after a 10-year absence. Result is painful to sit through, particularly for fans of his old movies — clumsy, amateurish, unfunny, frequently incoherent. Stick with the late show. GRADE: D

LAST METRO, THE (PG) — Catherine Deneuve, Heinz Bennent. (Drama) Paris, World War II. The Nazis occupy the city and we watch as a theater tries to stay open. The theater's guiding spirit, a Jew, is hidden by his wife, the company's star, in the basement. And the show must go on. A promising plot, but director and co-writer Francois Truffaut lets it fall apart totally, with a preposterous love affair contributing mightily to the downfall. GRADE: C

MODERN ROMANCE (R) — Albert Brooks, Kathryn Harrold. (Comedy) On-again, off-again, on-again love affair between a neurotic Hollywood film editor and a beautiful, very patient bank executive. This is the second stab at filmmaking by Brooks, a stand-up comic following in Woody Allen's footsteps as star-writer-director. Though he tends to hog the camera a bit, the results are fresh, charming and quite funny. B-plus

NIGHTHAWKS (R) — Sylvester Stallone, Billy Dee Williams, Lindsay Wagner, Rutger Hauer. (Cops and terrorists) Stallone gives Rocky a rest and here plays a cop who goes after an international terrorist. Good action and, surprisingly, little real violence or bloodshed. And the police are not the fools they usually are. Grade: B

RAGING BULL (R) — Robert De Niro. (Drama) This is a film by Martin Scorsese that depicts the rise and fall of prize fighter Jake LaMotta. It is powerful, but always very self-conscious of its artistry; you never for a moment forget you are watching a movie (and a performance by De Niro) that is designed to be arty. Thus, it loses its punch. It is bloody and raucous, but never for a moment real. GRADE: B

TESS (PG) — Nastassia Kinski, Peter Firth, Leigh Lawson. (Romantic drama) Roman Polanski directed this stunning version of Hardy's "Tess of the d'Urbervilles," and it is visually a smasher. The sad story of the put-upon lass and the two men in her life is surely dated, but Polanski — and his superb cast — make it so lovely to look at that the long (nearly three hours) film seems to fly. GRADE: A (Film grading: A — superb; B — good; C — average; D — poor; F — awful)

(Nellie) without whose encouragement and love for drama and music the parent organization of The Everett Community Players, namely Drama Music Workshop would not have come to being and you would not have the thrill of seeing this splendid, professional and charming production of Gilbert & Sullivan's world famous "The Pirates of Penzance."

Carousels fade away

the exhibit itself, the children use the new words to describe the animals in terms of their personality: the claws show ferocity; the teeth, strength; the eyes, wildness.

Later, the kids live the story themselves by visiting a working carousel on the National Mall. There, each child decides which carousel animal best matches his or her own personality, then hops aboard the chosen creature, posing for a Polaroid picture before the ride begins.

Back in the classroom again, the students practice the new words they've learned, and each child pastes the picture in a folder to take home. The lesson is not quite over, though, because each child is asked to write an explanation under the picture — "This.....(name of animal) is like me because....."

Trips to other museums and research facilities similarly emphasize learning through firsthand experience. In the National Museum of Natural History, for instance, students use the exhibits of natural objects to develop a new vocabulary and to explain how certain geometric shapes occur in nature — how, for example, circles, triangles and spirals appear in rocks, feathers and shells. At the Smithsonian's Chesapeake Bay Center for Environmental Studies, an ecology field station in Edgewater, Md., the youngsters comb the beach, uncovering a variety of creatures and objects — insects, land crabs, shells and driftwood. Although many of the objects are commonplace, for some of the children the occasion may be the first time they have articulated their thoughts about them.

D.C. Muller may have carved this elegant cavalry horse, made by W.H. Dentzel Co. of Philadelphia.

At the Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden, the children might explore some of the more sophisticated principles of abstract art by examining a sculpture by the Italian master, Alberto Giacometti, and making their own clay sculptures imitating his. Or, during a visit to the National Zoological Park, they might see how animals are adapted to life in different habitats; a seal's body, they learn, is suited to living in the ocean, while an otter's body is suited to living on land and in the water.

"Learning the museums means firsthand learning, the kind that sticks," Jo Ann Mackinson, a teacher who assisted in last summer's program, says. "The lessons give the children not only something to talk about but also the words to express themselves."

Back on the National Mall, the carousel slows down and finally stops. Grinning broadly, a 7-year-old boy jumps off and signs to his teacher, "The lion is strong like me." Going round and round, the carousel-classroom has carried the boy straight into a new experience, a new understanding.

The charm of stencil art

By Marilyn Hoffman

Adele Bishop has helped dust off and revive the Early American art of stenciling, a decorative craft practiced by our forebears but left largely in limbo for the last 20 years. Miss Bishop has worked to bring the art of stenciling forward out of the past, give it a vital present, and what she predicts will be a glowing future.

As one of the country's foremost authorities on stencil art, she is today busily writing about, teaching, and demonstrating this ancient craft form that actually dates back to Greek and Roman times. Although she began her career as a custom stenciler in New York City, in partnership with the co-author of her book, Cile Lord, she has, since her marriage to John Callaway, lived and worked out of her home and studio in Dorset, Vt. The business office for Adele Bishop Inc. is located in nearby Manchester.

Several years ago many top interior designers across the country began to feature stenciled walls and floors in their work, and in trend-setting "decorator show-house" projects and in department store model rooms. And suddenly, or so it seemed, stencil art was again stylish and in fashion. And all kinds of people were rushing in to learn the secret of its charm.

Stenciling, Miss Bishop points out, is being used today as overall wall, ceiling and floor decoration, as well as for borders around windows and doors. It also appears as dados, friezes, and ceiling medallions.

This rediscovered folk art is also being used to enliven window shades, furniture, pillows, and other accessories. Ready-made stencil kits are available through arts and crafts stores, and stencil paper, paints, and brushes are now available nationally for those who want to design, cut, and paint on their own original patterns.

Stencil decoration is done by dabbing paint onto a surface through a paper or cardboard opening, cut with the desired motif. Two-color patterns require two stencils, the second applied when the first paint has dried.

In earlier times, when wallpaper was both expensive and rare, itinerant artists traveled around the countryside, painting borders, stripes, and stylized motifs directly onto the whitewashed plaster of Colonial homes. They cut their own stencils and mixed their own primitive paints.

At present, a whole new crop of stencil specialists are starting their own businesses, not only to offer custom stenciling services, but to produce stenciled articles to sell retail, and to teach the craft to individuals and to adult education classes.

These specialists include people like Judith Hendershot in Evanston, Ill., Miriam Jordan and Louise Jones and their "Handcrafted Walls" business in Lake Jackson, Texas, Megan Parry in Boulder, Colo., and literally hundreds of others.

Cile Lord continues as one of the most innovative custom stencilers in New York City, and trains and employs a staff of stencil artists. They work with interior designers, architects, and with people who are involved in all aspects of historic restoration and rejuvenation.

According to Adele Bishop, museums and historic societies are giving lectures and demonstrations on stenciling all over the country. "Since most people don't know what top quality stenciling looks like, much less how to do it, such demonstrations are increasingly in demand, not only at museums and clubs, but in stores and schools," she says.

Stenciling parties, like the old-fashioned barn raisings and quilting bees, have emerged as practical social occasions, Miss Bishop points out. People who want to stencil a room in one day are inviting their friends and asking them to pitch in to help.

Whole families are also enjoying stenciling together as husbands, wives, and children tackle do-it-together projects. Stenciling is being used as a joint effort in many community projects as well.

Adele Bishop expects a bright future for stenciling, and predicts that it will be used increasingly in school art classes, will be taught to senior citizens and to the handicapped, and applied to creative prison reform programs since it gives instant results and a sense of creative accomplishment without a great outlay of money or materials. She also foresees that more and more people will be stenciling their own designs onto their clothing, as well as onto the textiles used in their homes.

As for Miss Bishop's current involvement, the Shelburne Museum in Shelburne, Vt., recently authorized her to reproduce its stencils, which are being marketed nationally. "The Shelburne Museum Stencils" can also be ordered directly from her, Box 557, Manchester, Vt. 05254.

Right now, Miss Bishop is conducting three-day teaching workshops each month, in order to build up a supply of people qualified to teach stencil techniques around the country.

The book that Miss Bishop co-authored with Cile Lord called "The Art of Decorative Stenciling" came out in hardback in 1976, and its third edition, published by Penguin, New York, is out this spring in paperback.

Two other books that Miss Bishop thinks could be useful to the serious stenciler, are "Early New England Wall Stencils" by Kenneth Jewett, a paperback published by the Harmony division of Crown Publishers Inc., New York, and "Early American Wall Stencils" by Janet Waring, a paperback published by the Dover Press, New York.

Wallcovering shows your personality

Design trends often follow contemporary moods, and the popular "natural" look is no exception. Breezy, back-to-nature wallcoverings meet desires for warm, natural environments.

The spacious, airy quality of these wallcoverings reflects practicality as well as aesthetics. Loose patterns and a pale palette open up small rooms. Warmth radiates from the soft, deep earth tones.

Planning a spacious environment is especially significant if you're decorating other rooms with the popular mini-prints. The geometric designs are classic, but they can also be confining. You need to reserve some space in the house; let some rooms "breathe." Open up a few informal rooms with light, loosely patterned wallcoverings. Butterflies in a meadow, or a bamboo garden would look refreshing and comfortable in an enclosed porch, den or family room.

The light, neutral colors and free-form grasses of wallcoverings make it easy to match furniture and accessories for the complete look. For example, white-lacquered wicker furniture and a few potted plants can transform a bare room into an indoor garden scene.

Softly-textured brushstroke prints or fabric patterns create the soft environment. Muted textures can be found in woven wallcoverings of nutmeg, walnut, bleached linen, or curry.

Treat your day-to-day living areas of the home with the easy-going look of natural designs. They're comfortable, casual, and will please your eye for a long time. Most wallcoverings are scrubbable and stripable, which enhances their use for the oft-occupied areas of the home.

LOW INTEREST MORTGAGE - NEGOTIABLE ASSET?

QUESTION: We've owned our house for many years and have an old mortgage loan at a very low interest rate. This may seem like a rather absurd question, but I'm curious: Would it make any sense for us to ask the bank if we can pay off the loan for less than the amount owed? I know this sounds silly, because we do owe the remaining balance, but it might make sense for the bank to take less than the balance in order to relieve themselves of such a low-interest loan. What do you think?

ANSWER: Surprisingly, this question was posed to a high-ranking official of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. He was asked if a low-interest mortgage is a negotiable asset. Here is his answer:

"Yes, especially now when current interest rates are well beyond those of many mortgages in bank portfolios. Here are some ways you can use this asset:

1. You liquidate a $20,000 mortgage for $15,000. Your house now cost you $5,000 less than you thought it did.
2. If you can't afford to liquidate the entire mortgage, perhaps you can reduce it at a discount.
3. As an asset that increases your home's appreciation.
4. You can re-negotiate your loan to a greater amount at, say, 12 percent interest instead of 14 percent or higher.
5. If you need cash, you can borrow on the increased equity. This offers better interest rates than short-term consumer loans.
6. To facilitate the sale of your home, you can help the buyer finance the purchase by re-negotiating a new mortgage.

You may have your own ideas, but a word of caution: the arithmetic must let the bank improve its position, or it's (no deal)."

You can see that even a representative of an association of traditional mortgage lenders believes there are many options available to you with your current mortgage. I would say the key to his comments is that your proposal must let the bank improve its position.

This week, COMING ATTRACTIONS finds entertainment in a few spots not normally covered before. They do not seem to be connected to each other but maybe you can match them up to your lifestyle. The Mass. Chapter of the American Rhododendron Society will flower show and shrub auction on Sunday, May 24 at the Suburban Experiment Station in Waltham. Admission will be free and the soil testing service of the Experiment Station will be available to accept soil and plant tissue samples, however soil test requires a 2 dollar fee.

This show will let people see several dozen hybrids and as many species all at once and compare catalog descriptions with reality. The auction lets people buy uncommon plants at almost common prices, unless auction fever takes hold. There will be many azaleas, hollies and mountain laurel as well as rhododendrons on the block.

The Mass. Chapter will have a diagram of the rhododendron display garden which is planned for the Case Estates of the Arnold Arboretum. This is a cooperative effort of the two organizations to show the public the development of rhododendron hybrids over the last 125 years. It will take several years to build the display garden but it seems to be off to a good start.

Since the show is halfway through the year people may join the chapter now for half the annual dues. For further information call 729-0725.

The nation's largest nonprofit citizens conservation organization, the National Wildlife Federation, had made its summer vacation plans: 12 back-to-nature vacations designed for young campers, singles, couples and entire families.

The vacations recommended for entire families of nature enthusiasts are NWF's unique six-day Conservation Summits, which emphasize conservation education and nature exploration. This year's Summits will be held at conference centers in the Blue Ridge Mountains of North Carolina, June 20 to 26; the Rocky Mountains of Colorado, July 5 to 11; the Adirondack Mountains of New York, July 9 to 25; and on the shores of Green Lake in Wisconsin, August 8 to 14.

wide variety of conservation-related subjects. The surrounding mountains, lakes, and streams are the textbooks and classrooms. Teachers are environmental educators, and the students pre-register for up to three workshops a day, in such subjects as nature drawing, backpacking basics, astronomy, or outdoor cooking. Teachers and students can receive college credit while attending the summits.

At their leisure, Summiteers can play tennis, ride horses, swim, hike or make field trips. Evening entertainment includes dancing, nature films, demonstrations of traditional crafts, or environmental forums. Babysitting and daycare are available.

Costs for a family of four at a Conservation Summit range from 800 dollars to 1,000 dollars, which includes tuition, accommodations and meals for the week.

The Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics will sponsor a free program for the public at 8 PM on Thursday, May 21, featuring a popular lecture in astronomy, a film, and telescopic observing, weather permitting.

The program will begin with the lecture "Gravitational Lenses: Some New Candidates," presented by Dr. Rudy Schild, an astronomer at the Center. Following the talk, the film, "Mirrors on the Universe: The MMT Story" will be shown and the public will be invited to use the telescopes on the observatory, if the weather permits.

TransAtlantic racing

Admission to the program is free and no tickets or advance reservations are required. Seating is limited and will be filled on a first-come basis. Doors open at 7:30 PM. The lecture is presented in the Phillips Auditorium of the Center for Astrophysics, 60 Garden St. in Cambridge.

The Center hosts "Observatory Nights" for the public on the third Thursday of each month. For news of upcoming programs, contact the Public Affairs office at 495-7463.

The New Film Company will host the theatrical premiere of "American Challenge: Alone Against the Atlantic", a 57-minute documentary of human courage and achievement. This film captures for the first time the intimate on-board story of 7 solo sailors facing an ultimate challenge: The Observer Singlehanded TransAtlantic Race.

This film will be shown May 16th at 7:30 PM and 9 PM and May 20th at 6:30 and 8 PM at the John Hancock Hall, 180 Berkeley St. in Boston. Advance tickets at Bostix and John Hancock Hall. For information 437-1323 or 421-2000.

This film details the efforts of six

American men and one woman, each sailing alone, using 18 specially modified cameras placed on their boats to share their thoughts, struggles, elations, disappointments and disasters, giving the audience a unique close-up view of people facing constant danger. Each sailor is under continual pressure - pounding to windward in a race against distant competitors - facing equipment failures, unpredictable weather, the risks of collision and capsizing - all for a lonely quest. No American has ever come close to winning this long and difficult race. However in 1980, the Americans completely turned around this record, sweeping every class.

From debating the merits of rhododendrons to digging into your soul to keep rowing across the forbidding Atlantic, from climbing towards the skies in the Blue Ridge Mountains to observing those skies from a Cambridge observatory, COMING ATTRACTIONS looks far and deep to find things to do. If you have an item of interest, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. Maybe one week we'll stay close to home.

Silver Medals for Sweet Adelines

The Merrimack Valley Chapter of Sweet Adelines won second place honors at a recent competition held at Symphony Hall in Springfield, Mass. The local chapter competed with 27 other women's barbershop choruses throughout New England, southern Quebec Province in Canada, and eastern New York state. Each of the members of the chorus was presented with a silver medal in honor of this accomplishment. In addition, one of the chapter's quartets, All That Jazz, won second place in the quartet competition.

For the first time in regional competition a trophy was presented to the chorus that scored the greatest number of points in the showmanship category. Merrimack Valley was the proud recipient of this award.

The local chapter has been invited to make four appearances at the Hatch Shell, summer home of the Boston Pops. In addition, it will also take part in the Lowell Regatta which takes place the weekend of May 30.

Newly appointed officers for the local chapter in the coming year are President, Jackie Moison from Lowell, Vice-President, Joyce Minosh from Westford, Treasurer, Marge Bennett from Tewksbury, Recording Secretary, Kam Drumm from Billerica and

On Saturday, April 25th, Reading was represented at the Massachusetts 4-H Horse Bowl in Ashland. The rep was Mary Hadad of the Reading 4-H Royal Riders, and she was one of four on the Middlesex County 4-H junior team competing against all the others in Massachusetts on horse knowledge. This team consisting of Mary along with Erin Mooney of Westford and Julie Webber and Deirdre Panas, both of Chelmsford, won first place in the state. They did a wonderful job and are to be congratulated. At the senior level, which was an individual competition, Middlesex County had two other winners, Laura Kennedy of Chelmsford, who will go on to competition at the National 4-H Horse Bowl this fall, and Heidi Webber of Chelmsford, who is an alternate.

Choate and Symmes Hospitals Consolidate

Well

A Supplement to Arlington Advocate, Lexington Minute-Man, Burlington Times-Union, Merrimack Valley Advertiser, Reading Chronicle, North Reading Transcript, Woburn Times and Wilmington Town-Crier.

Responsive to Our Communities

In its emphasis on meeting the needs of the nine communities identified as comprising its service area—Arlington, Lexington, Woburn, Billerica, Burlington, Reading, North Reading, Tewksbury and Wilmington—Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., is placing great significance on community responsiveness.

Among the ways in which it is moving to accomplish this are through community outreach programs and community involvement, not only on the Board of Trustees and Corporation but also in the establishment of advisory councils for each of the three facilities—Choate and Symmes Hospitals and the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the new organization, Fred C. Bailey, president of Teledyne Engineering Services, Inc., in Waltham and a former member of the Lexington Board of Selectmen, is one of many community and corporate leaders in this area who recognize the dependence on quality care provided by the two hospitals over the years and believe it is worth the hard work to see that it is strengthened.

One important reason for the consolidation was that we had two hospitals, both in severe need of physical plant upgrading and both doing business at the same old stand in the same old way.

Fred C. Bailey, Chairman of the Board of Trustees, holds the first meeting of the new organization.

Clearly, we were encouraged to seek out what was best for our communities. The planners we hired began to address the purpose of the consolidation in terms of defining community needs and then to put together a systems plan and facility upgrading proposal to deal with this.

How will the communities benefit from this? "In the first place, we're here, and we're here to stay because we believe there is a place for both hospitals to serve as community hospitals. Beyond that, there is no desire or intent to disrupt any of the functions of the large teaching hospitals. On the contrary, we will be looking to serve what all perceive as unmet needs by those living in the service area of the consolidated hospital and those segments of the population who have special needs. Generally speaking, at this time, the elderly are seen as unique in their requirements," he stated.

In the lengthy and detailed application and review process required by the state before approval can be given to any proposal of this magnitude, Mr. Bailey pointed out, "We were supported all the way by the Health Systems Agencies and the Department of Public Health, and our application for development of the systems approach and facilities upgrading was cheerfully granted."

Now that we're past that hurdle, where do we go from here? The mechanics of the consolidation are well underway and although it is a time of change for everyone at both hospitals, there are no problems which are insurmountable.

The important question now is: When will the effect of the consolidation begin to be felt in the communities? We're beginning to assemble community advisory councils for each of the facilities which will help us identify community needs. At the same time, we are reviewing potential candidates for two designated trustee slots. One of these will represent community services in general and the other will be nominated on the basis of experience in medical care for the elderly.

Mr. Bailey emphasized that the three 30-member advisory councils are by no means only token measures to solicit community participation. Those who will be chosen will be the result of extensive search efforts to find consumers who are aware of the health needs of all age groups and interest levels. Persons named to the working committees will be representatives of local government, business and industry, social service agencies and clergy who can advise the hospital trustees on an ongoing basis.

Efforts are also underway to establish community-based outpatient care facilities. The first of these—a private venture endorsed by the consolidated hospital, has already opened in Billerica. We are currently working on a plan to develop contracts with regional special care hospitals in order to be able to provide better care faster.

At the same time, planning is going ahead for the badly needed facility renovations. All in all, in a year I think the communities will see the formation of a basic health care delivery plan, and over the span of the next three to five years, we should see the completion of the facilities required to do this.

Looking Into the Future The Case for Consolidation

The consolidation of two community hospitals which have been providing medical and surgical care for nearly 80 years did not come about suddenly. Discussions and meetings took place over the course of nearly a decade and for much of that time included a third hospital.

One of the contributing factors in their initial discussions was the realization that all three built at approximately the same time, were in need of facility upgrading and long range planning if they were to continue to provide the level of health care that reflects the technological age in which we are living. Besides each was seeking state approval for programs that would result in much duplication. It was decided that they would be wise to consider merging.

As in the case with many mergers, discussions were directed toward the replacement of existing plants and the establishment of a new hospital on a new site, however, as the results of Choate-Symmes consultants' studies were analyzed, it became apparent that a new hospital was financially unfeasible, (2) not responsive to the need for accessible care, and (3) almost certain of doom in the eyes of the state regulatory and licensing agencies.

What these agencies were shouting was "Reduce your bed count, cut your costs." The trustees and executive officers at Choate and Symmes Hospitals, with the assistance of one of the most highly respected health planning firms in the industry today, had the sense and the foresight to realize that the agencies were right. They also realized that there was an alternative and better way to meet their communities' needs, and so for more than a year they devoted countless hours to the development of what may be a model for other hospital consolidations.

What they came up with was a proposal for a systems approach to health care and preliminary plans to upgrade the existing facilities. Put simply, a systems approach provides:

- community outreach;
- increased accessibility to health care through the development of satellite ambulatory care centers such as the Regional Health Center in Wilmington; a Choate Hospital community center opened nearly three years ago;
- health education for all segments of the population;
- identification of their unmet needs and coordination or provision of them in cooperation with community agencies.

Accents are on health promotion and the promise of a better quality of life for all, more efficient use of health care dollars as the result of better planning and the elimination of unnecessary duplication, and new programs which arise in response to demonstrated needs and which are no longer related only to acute care.

Following approval by the Public Health Council on February 10, the statement was made that the Choate-Symmes application was "one of the most significant, innovative and imaginative health planning programs to come before the Council in ten years."

All of this is summarized so well in the American Hospital Association's 1981 theme for National Hospital Week, which is being observed this week, "The direction of modern health care is health promotion—toward looking well and feeling well. Side by side with this, in what they hope to accomplish in the consolidation, Choate and Symmes are looking well (far) into the future in their long range planning to provide for consumer needs as they mark off their own "well" futures.

The first meeting of the new Board of Trustees of Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., which took place April 1.

"A Comprehensive and Broad Network"

The consolidation of Choate and Symmes Hospitals represents a significant development in the delivery of health services in our region—and is the result of a broad and dynamic planning process that began to evolve in the early 1970s. Said Paul J. Downey, president of Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., who has served as president of Choate Memorial Hospital in Woburn since 1969:

Until then, the planning undertaken by hospitals tended to be facilities-oriented and was likely to focus on the needs of acute care patients inside the walls of the hospital. By the mid-1970s, however, hospital planning horizons had broadened to include the overall health needs of the community. This was, in part, due to the emerging role of public health policy.

During the decade of the 70s, Mr. Downey said, government began to pay a greater share of hospital bills through Medicare and Medicaid programs and because of increased hospitalization, and as a result, became more involved in trying to influence the health care delivery system and its associated costs. Perhaps the most significant development was the enactment in 1974-75 of the Health Planning and Resources Development Act (PL 93-610) and hence, the creation of a nationwide planning network of Health Systems Agencies (HSAs).

HSAs and other state health agencies such as the Rate Setting Commission and Department of Public Health posed a twin challenge. The health planners were encouraging hospitals to develop broader and more innovative health delivery systems while at the same time the regulators were exerting pressure to contain costs and minimize duplication of services.

Choate Hospital responded to this in 1973 by convening a Long-Range Planning Committee to consider the impact of external influences on the hospital and to study the health needs of the community outside of acute care. The findings of the committee led directly to the development of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington, a satellite ambulatory care facility which Choate opened in 1978. This 25,000 square foot health center provides comprehensive, community-based ambulatory services ranging from urgent care in the 24-hour Walk-In Unit to care given by primary care physicians and specialties in the doctors' office component of the facility. The Regional Health Center is now regarded by many as a prototype of the way ambulatory services will be delivered in the future.

The planning process that would eventually lead to consolidation of Choate and Symmes Hospitals began in earnest in 1978 and has been conducted throughout in the spirit of finding ways to maximize the efficiency of available health facilities and personnel to broaden and rationalize services available to the community.

The effectiveness of the process was confirmed when our Determination of Need (DON) certificate for consolidation was given enthusiastic approval by the Massachusetts Public Health Council in February. At that time, a DON program analyst called the consolidation process "one of the best examples of regional health planning to date."

Consolidation gives us a substantially larger and stronger operating and financial base and allows Choate and Symmes to undertake projects collectively that would have been impossible individually. Mr. Downey pointed out. "It enables us to strengthen and organize the region's acute care resources and gives us an opportunity to greatly expand our services to the community at large, emphasizing programs for children and elderly."

What we have established, the chief executive officer said, is not simply larger. It is a departure from the way hospitals define their role in health care—and it is conceptually different from traditional means by which health care is delivered and obtained.

What we envision is a comprehensive and broad network of services that link entry level and ambulatory care with community-based hospital care with specialized hospital care available elsewhere. We believe that the outcome will be a regional health system easily accessible to all and offering the broadest possible spectrum of services free from confusion and delay," he concluded.

While we are developing programs for the future, we must also continue to monitor and strengthen those we are already doing well," said G. Roger Martin, administrator at Symmes Hospital in Arlington for the past three years and the newly appointed executive vice-president and general director of Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc.

We're going to see ourselves moving in the direction of de-emphasizing acute care and toward what is referred to as "vertical integration of services" where hospitals are becoming more and more involved in health-related activities that don't focus exclusively on acute illness.

In connection with this, we are hopeful that somewhere down the line, we will be developing more services to better meet the needs of the high percentage of elderly in this area. The goal is to ensure that our citizens, who are living longer, will be able to lead more independent and productive lives and enjoy better health than any previous generation.

One example of these programs is congregate housing, which the hospitals are already talking about and will begin to look at in more detail. We have to determine where we stand in the community in relation to this, whether to fill a sponsorship role to encourage other agencies or take the initiative ourselves to develop this.

However, before we get into diversification and a lot of new programs," Mr. Martin said, "for the short term, the main focus of the actual consolidation is on the building program." Both hospitals have already recognized their major deficiencies; part of the Determination of Need application to consolidate was requested state approval of an $18 million renovation and construction program at the existing hospitals.

It is nearly 20 years since any major changes were made at Symmes. Even expansion of the Dietary Department in the mid-1970s is not what one would call a major upgrading. The addition of a new wing will result in replacement of more than half the total patient care facilities in the hospital, so that the oldest will then be those built in the 1960s.

He pointed out that the Emergency Room was part of that same construction and was intended to accommodate 12,000 patient visits a year. Now we're up to 18,000, not including another 10,000 private or referred visits. Our plan is to take all these into one area so that the Emergency Room will be set up physically with a range area for segregating acute emergencies from non-emergency patients who are here for diagnostic workups and examinations.

Another component of the renovation at Symmes will be the upgrading of the A Wing, opened in 1949. By locating all diagnostic services there, we will have ample room to adequately care for the current number of patient visits and be able to provide for future growth, Mr. Martin said.

A new patient care wing was added at Choate Hospital in the early 70s, but the constant changes and developments in medical care require that it also be updated. Although new construction will not be so extensive at the Woburn hospital, space will be added which will provide several departments, including Dietary, Pharmacy, and Physical and Respiratory Therapy, the opportunity to expand programs and acquire new equipment.

The consolidated Pediatric Unit, which will be located at Choate, will undergo major renovation and reorganization in order to allow for the establishment of a residency affiliation with a major Boston teaching hospital and educational exchange for nurses. Patients will be allowed to stay with their children during their hospitalization, thereby sharing in their care.

The consolidation will also strengthen the financial base of the two hospitals and with it their capability to develop programs that meet community needs.

By organizing our services and resources for maximum utilization, and by avoiding duplicate spending of health care dollars which are becoming more scarce as regulation and competition increase, we will be able to use those same dollars more effectively so that new programs will, in large measure, be supported by dollars currently available within the organizational framework.

A broader financial base will also allow the hospitals to develop certain internal areas of expertise which neither one, operating singly, could afford in the past. "It is now within the hospitals' resources to hire the calibre of people they need for long-range planning and development programs, instead of making use of consultants," the chief operating officer pointed out.

Widening Horizons for Nurses

Kathryn Melendy, RN, Vice President for Patient Services

"I am excited. I consider it an opportunity to develop pioneer-type things that haven't been done before in a community hospital," said Kathryn A. Melendy, RN, who has been appointed vice-president for Patient Services in the April 1 consolidation of Choate Memorial Hospital in Woburn and Symmes Hospital in Arlington.

"Some of the relationships we're going to begin will give us the opportunity to be involved in health care in a way that is going to be very meaningful," she explained, referring to teaching affiliations being worked out with a major Boston medical center for nursing as well as residency programs.

Sometimes in a consolidation nurses don't feel an impact. But I see the consolidation of Choate and Symmes Hospitals as relying a lot on nursing to make things happen. For example, with the elderly I see nurses being used in a more specialized way. Those with a special interest in the continuity of care and teaching of geriatric patients will be encouraged to become part of a team in a multi-disciplinary approach to their total care.

"Nurses will be given the opportunity to do what they have been educated to do—to be health educators and to be involved in an integral way in health planning and health promotion while they continue to broaden their skills in roles for which they have been recognized.

I am really pleased that the systems approach is geared to the team approach, and I firmly believe that what is being developed here is a model that will be well respected on the state as well as the national level.

Throughout all the planning and discussions which have stretched out over several years, culminating in the July 10 approval by the state Public Health Council, Mrs. Melendy pointed out that she has been very pleased that the word "patient" has been used a lot.

"So often in this busy world, some of us forget what we're here for.

Beyond that, we're looking at our communities in the planning of all kinds of programs that will form a network of health care services. Nurses will be really proud to be a part of that. That is my goal.

The new vice president of the combined nursing departments whose staff totals nearly 600 sees a level of satisfaction being offered to nurses that is greater than ever before.

"We're associated here with people with vision. Nurses who want to progress and make a real contribution to those things which are important are going to have a real opportunity to do that. The organization has recognized the value of the nurse and given to nursing a sense of accomplishment, an input that is special, and for that I am very excited for nursing."

A native of New Hampshire, Mrs. Melendy was graduated from Sacred Heart

Hospital School of Nursing in Manchester, N.H., and received a BS degree at Roger Williams College in Providence, R.I. She is completing requirements for an MBA degree at Suffolk University.

The mother of two teenagers, she joined the Choate Hospital nursing department nearly five years ago, serving half of that time as director of nursing education before being made vice-president for nursing services.

Physicians See a Broadening Scope of Services

As one listens to each of the points of view represented by those involved in the consolidation of Choate and Symmes Hospitals, it becomes immediately clear that the benefits will be far-reaching, numerous and varied.

Hospital administrators and trustees look upon the action as enabling both facilities to upgrade their plants and their programs in order to meet the ever-increasing needs of the communities. The state Public Health Council would not have given its approval if it did not agree that these could be accomplished in a cost-effective manner.

The communities themselves will come to expect a broadening scope of services. Nurses will benefit from planned teaching affiliations, and physicians see in the merger of the two community hospitals a broader base to provide increased resources on which they must depend to keep up with medical technology and provide the full range of medical and surgical specialties their patients have a right to expect in health care today.

From the doctors' point of view, these are key things, said Robert E. Carey, M.D., chief of staff at Symmes. "The reasons that it requires a certain number of patients to provide a big enough base to justify them. This may sound a bit cold and calculating, but it's a fact that unless you have enough patients to provide something to them, you cannot provide the specialty."

One example is pediatrics. If the two hospitals had not merged, there is no way each could continue to provide pediatrics in service badly needed in the community but because of an aging population, one whose utilization has decreased dramatically in the past decade. With consolidation, both medical staffs are provided the expertise formerly available to each staff individually.

Another example is psychiatric care. Symmes patients have had excellent psychiatric services but never have they had psychiatric inpatient care and hence have never had any psychiatric nurses available. However, Choate has had inpatient psychiatric care for a number of years and has excellent psychiatric nurses and ancillary staff who have great expertise in group therapy. The joining of the two psychiatric staffs and the availability to Arlington patients of Choate inpatient facilities and psychiatric nurses is an enormous gain to our community.

Certain other, more complex technologies such as echocardiographic equipment and sophisticated radionuclide cardiac imaging will now be shared by the two hospitals. The physician continued, emphasizing that this sharing will help to contain the escalating costs of health care while increasing the availability of these highly specialized services to the community.

A focus of the consolidation is the development of a systems approach to health care. What, if anything, is this going to mean to the communities? Dr. Carey was asked.

The suggestion by the consultants who directed the hospitals through the state Determination of Need application process, that we term a systems approach, is very exciting for the health care professionals as well as for the communities served. Both hospitals have demonstrated their interest and ability in this. Choate has reached out to Wilmington, where it opened the Regional Health Center nearly three years ago, and Symmes has shown readiness to cooperate with other parts of the health care system in Arlington and Lexington, leading the way in coordinating Visiting Nurse and other home care services and pioneering a great deal of community health education.

The concept of the combined hospitals coordinating the multiple health care services now available in their respective communities and filling in gaps following careful study of the existing services is a very exciting and challenging task. We are seeing this, for example, in discussions presently underway to coordinate certain community services so that both can be further strengthened."

The physician also complimented both hospitals for working closely with physicians in the communities to make hospital services more readily and easily available to their patients. He explained that a group of dentists and physicians from both hospitals has already joined forces to open the new Regional Health Center at Tebbel Cove Road in North Billerica.

Billerica has always gotten a large part of its hospital services from Symmes and Choate, but only meager ambulatory care has been available in the community. Now, without any direct hospital involvement, a beautiful new health center with comprehensive services and a walk-in center has opened. Symmes and Choate will provide hospital inpatient care plus extensive diagnosis services including laboratory, X-ray, echocardiography, etc.

Even more challenging than the expanding capacities to deal with existing disease is the prospect of better patient education and ultimately better disease prevention in our communities. I look forward to very exciting years ahead, with ever improving health care available to the areas served by our two hospitals. Dr. Carey concluded.

David O. Mintz, M.D., is the president of the Choate Hospital Medical Staff and faces the task of helping consolidate the Choate and Symmes Staffs by October. George M. Hazel, M.D., is immediate past president of the Medical Staff and has been a key figure for the past two years in planning and implementing consolidation. Dr. Hazel is also the medical director of the Regional Health Center in Wilmington.

Consolidation of Choate and Symmes Hospitals creates the best of two worlds, says Dr. Mintz. He explains, "Area residents can continue to maintain their relationships with their family physicians and still go to their local community hospital while at the same time benefiting from a stronger, broader consolidated institution."

Dr. Hazel believes that the 305-bed Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., is stronger in several ways than the 174 and 154 hospitals from which it developed. He says, "This is so for reasons that are political, logistical, financial and in terms of what we call 'soft-ware.'"

Dr. Hazel continues, "In an era when state and federal government are exercising more and more control over the health industry, the political clout that larger institutions bring to bear on public planning, regulatory and legislative bodies is crucial."

The two physicians point out that a larger financial base allows for greater flexibility in acquiring new and advanced medical equipment and facilities, and enables the new corporation to undertake new construction and renovation at existing sites. The logistical advantages they cite are associated with the fact that the two smaller hospitals by themselves could not give the same range or depth of services that the new system can offer. This is so both in terms of the potentially greater pool of physicians specialists available to Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., and in terms of the system's ability to consider more sophisticated, perhaps, more expensive equipment. For instance, highly sophisticated X-Ray or Laboratory Equipment that may not have been appropriate in a 150-170 bed hospital, might well be shared within a multi-facility 305 bed system.

What we refer to as 'soft-ware,' states Dr. Hazel, are actually non-physician health programs and services offered to the public. These may include nutrition counseling, social services, family counseling, occupational health and a regular schedule of public education sessions on health topics of current interest. Special emphasis has also been placed on finding new ways of identifying and serving community elderly and children's needs.

Consolidation also gives Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., new opportunities to develop stronger medical school affiliations. Already under development is an affiliation for a pediatric residency program at the corporation's 20-bed consolidated pediatric unit at Choate Hospital. This arrangement, says Dr. Hazel, would provide many of the advantages of the Boston-based pediatric specialty hospitals, for example, 24-hour in-house pediatrician coverage, while maintaining the close, personal and caring atmosphere of the community-based hospital, he concludes.

It is evident that health care given both inside and outside the hospital will, because of consolidation, be significantly improved, states Dr. Mintz. He concludes, "We as a medical staff look forward to the new opportunities offered by Choate-Symmes Health Services, Inc., and believe that our patients and our community will be well served by the new institution."

RHCW: Tomorrow's Health Center Today

The Regional Health Center in Wilmington (RHCW) at 500 Salem Street is a prototype of health centers of the future.

Built in 1978 as a cooperative venture by the Wilmington community and Choate Memorial Hospital in response to community health needs, the ultra-modern facility, with its bright colors and feeling of spaciousness, offers a comprehensive and coordinated health care program to benefit all who use it.

Most are surprised at its efficient central records system. To provide continuity of care, at the time of a patient's first visit his medical record is begun and entered into that system. On each of his subsequent visits it is pulled from the files for reference and up-to-date notations.

While most health centers are extensions of a hospital's outpatient department, the RHCW provides services traditionally available in hospitals, such as laboratory and x-ray services, in addition to those normally found in medical office buildings.

Twenty-four Walk-In Urgent Care, complemented by these diagnostic services, is located in one area, while doctors' offices, set up to resemble group practices, are located in another. Each of the primary care physicians and the subspecialists, who are seen by appointment, share reception and examining areas and support staff. A patient who comes in to see an internist or pediatrician, for example, need not drive from office to office to see an orthopedic surgeon, ophthalmologist, dermatologist or the like. They are all accessible at the RHCW where any one of the physicians may want to call in another physician in the building for consultation.

The RHCW also provides nutrition and social service, counseling, speech and hearing diagnostic services, an intensive program in health education and health promotion, and an occupational health program widely used by area industry and corporations.

A one and a half mile Life Course on the grounds of the facility, use of which is free and open to all, provides a perfect setting for jogging and exercise programs.

The RHCW is an excellent example of the reason for the consolidation of Choate and Symmes Hospitals accessible and comprehensive health care provided in direct response to community needs.
